

Educator Says Schools Now Have More Responsibilities

(Editor's Note: The following article was written by Dr. Louise Wood Seyler, deputy superintendent of Los Angeles city schools, voted woman of the year in education for 1956 in the Associated Press women's editors' poll. In it this distinguished educator outlines some of the problems that face America's public schools.)

By DR. LOUISE SEYLER
The public schools of today are faced with many problems. The fact that schools are faced with problems is nothing new, but the type of problems becomes increasingly complex.

I am referring particularly to the pressure from the community for the assumption by the schools of greater and greater responsibilities. An elementary school which concerned itself only with the Three R's would be most unsatisfactory to a modern community, I am sure.

Let me explain by an example or two: Today we take for granted that we must furnish some type of health services. Today we gear our program to the education of all of the children of all of the people. This means the atypical child as well as the typical. This means the child handicapped with physical problems as well as the physically perfect child.

The pupil in high school is faced with a program of many requirements. Each of these requirements is fine in itself, but we are at present almost to the point where anything new to be introduced means a withdrawal of something being taught at present.

Since 1900 our population has increased 100 per cent. Since 1900 our high school population has increased 1400 per cent. With an increase like this unheard of any other place in the world and with the demands for schools to assume new responsibilities, educators and laymen alike need to take a long look into the crowded curriculum of today.

How can we best meet the needs of all the children? Parents are entitled to believe that their children will have the basic foundation for successful adulthood. The classroom teacher with the many pressures of daily lesson assignments and subject requirements cannot always spend as much time with the individual as he would like.

Early in the educational career, counseling and guidance help must be given, so that each individual in our public schools has the time and thought of an expert in thinking through with him the requirements necessary to make him a successful adult citizen.

New Recipes Bring Zest To Yam Dishes

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Yams are good mixers. Their smooth texture, sweet and bland, combines well with other foods.

We like to bake them in their skins, scoop out the orange flesh, mash it with butter and salt and add finely diced celery—for crisp texture contrast—along with other flavoring tidbits.

Then back the filling goes into the shells and the stuffed yams are returned to the oven for reheating. If you don't wish to spoon the pulp back into the potato shells, you may turn it into individual scallop shells or a shallow casserole—a pie dish is fine—for reheating in the oven.

Here are several variations on this basic theme. You'll find that although each flavor-change has a distinct personality of its own, all of them taste good with roast chicken, duck or turkey.

These recipes were tested with the deep yellow, sugary and moist sweet potatoes called yams and so no extra sweetening or liquid were needed.

SPICY STUFFED YAMS
Ingredients: 4 medium-sized yams (1½ pounds), 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 4 tablespoons apple butter, ¼ cup finely diced celery, salt.

Method: Scrub yams in cold water; dry. Bake in hot (425 degrees) oven until soft—about 45 minutes. Immediately cut thin slice from the top of each potato with a sharp knife or kitchen scissors; scoop out pulp and put through ricer or food mill.

Stir in butter and apple butter, then celery and salt to taste. Spoon back into shells; return to oven until very hot—about 15 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings. (Once yams have baked tender, don't let them stand around in or out of the oven or skins will probably get soggy and it may be impossible to scoop out pulp without tearing them.)

Note: The amount of apple butter called for in this recipe gave a delicate spice flavor; a little more of the apple butter may be added if desired.

WALDORF STUFFED YAMS
Use recipe for Spicy Stuffed Yams but substitute ½ cup finely diced peeled raw apple for the apple butter.

GOLDEN STUFFED YAMS
Use recipe for Spicy Stuffed Yams but substitute 9 to 12 dried apricots for the apple butter. Soak the apricots in very hot water for 5 to 10 minutes, then drain and dice fine before adding to yam mixture.

MISSION STUFFED YAMS
Use recipe for Spicy Stuffed Yams but substitute 4 dried figs for the apple butter. Soak the figs in very hot water until softened, if necessary, then clip stems and dice fine before adding to the yam mixture.

KITCHEN NOTES
Use yams promptly after you bring them home from the market because they do not keep well at room temperature.

Leftover cooked yams are delicious when sliced or diced and browned in butter in a skillet.

Always drain yams you are boiling as soon as they are tender so they won't become waterlogged.

Both grated lemon and orange rind add good flavor to masked yams.

Yams are worthwhile using in family meals because they are a rich source of vitamin A; they also provide worthwhile quantities of vitamin C and small amounts of the B vitamins and minerals.

Flower Show Discussed

Houston Woman Speaks At Garden Club Meeting

Possibilities and problems of the spring flower show schedule were discussed by Mrs. J. L. Webb of Houston at the Friday afternoon meeting of the A&M Garden Club.

Members and guests of the club gathered in the Memorial Student Center to hear Mrs. Webb explain that while the schedule covers a long period and offers many opportunities for interpretation, entries are often bound by strict limitations.

Mrs. Webb had prepared 15 examples to illustrate how she would fulfill schedule requirements.

For "Gatherings from the Garden of Eden," she chose a semi-aquatic setting, using an irregular glass plate, scraps of molten glass, coral, water birds, a small green serpent, yellow acacia and a red apple.

"The Stone Age" was simply done—a mound of stone and rough wood carried a few sprays of vari-colored foliage.

The Egyptian, the Greek and Roman, the Chinese and the Japanese influences were incorporated in arrangements Mrs. Webb showed to illustrate "An Offering to a God."

She expressed "The Joy of Spring" with three tulips and an upper level of bamboo sprouts.

"The Oregon Trail" was the theme chosen by Mrs. Webb for the class entitled "Pioneer Days." In a forest of acacia, red berries and foliage, she depicted a woman loading her husband's gun in the fight against Indians, while on the other side of the forest a hunter was shown shooting bear.

For the present-day Early American decor, she had filled a handsome copper-toned container with bright fruit, dried grasses, flowers and thistle.

One of her most striking pieces was made to suggest the "Tropics of South America." For this, Mrs. Webb combined heavy foliage with the brilliant blooms of the Bird of Paradise flower.

In her arrangements for "The Atomic Age" Mrs. Webb used Cero-pla leaves to depict clouds of smoke, Anthurium blooms as tongues of flame, test tubes of bright liquids, and sprays of flame-colored gladioli.

To open the meeting, Mrs. R. E. Patterson gave the invocation. Mrs. Webb was introduced by Mrs. Tom Taylor.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. C. B. Campbell asked for helpers to work in the cemetery at 9 a.m. Wednesday. Hostesses for the day were the Mesdames John Ashton, R. L. Brown and J. S. Roberts.
