Far East Problems 'Complex': Harrison

The problems of the Far East are deep and complex. We should try to understand them, Brian Harrison, professor of history at the University of Hong Kong told about 100 people at the Great Issues Series held last night in the Memorial Student Center.

"The problem facing these countries," Harrison said, "is welding the many different groups in a country together."

Speaking on the "Far Eastern Problems of Today" Harrison said one of the big problems was the large minorities in these countries.

"These minorities are largely Chinese," he said. "They have left their homeland, but they still seem to think that the Motherland can do no wrong."

Communism in China has actually helped other countries of this area. Many Chinese minorities have turned their loyalties from China to their adopted country because of it.

Japan was once in a position of leadership in the Far East, but now the models for government are India and China. India is representing the democratic form of government and China, the Communist, he said.

"The countries of Asia want to be equal to the United States as individual nations," he said, "not in power or size, but in the same way adolescents want to be important—for themselves."

Nationalism is a very prevalent spirit in these countries, he continued. This was the spirit behind the revolution in China, and the spirit that has influenced all Asian nations from Turkey to Japan.

Harrison is touring the United States on a Fulbright Travel Award. He is going to San Francisco where he will embark for Hong Kong in March.

Justice Tom C. Clark of the U. S. Supreme Court will be the next Great Issues speaker, March 20.

Ag Eco Prof Gets Award From CROP

Dr. Daniel Russell of the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology has received a token of appreciation for 10-years work in carrying out a world wide program of aid to needy people in foreign countries.

Serving as chairman of the Texas part of Christian Rural Overseas Program from 1949 to 1954 and honorary chairman in 1955 and 1956, his work consisted of organizing and assisting the program in Texas counties.

CROP is a joint program of churches, farm organizations and farm people to collect food, fiber, livestock and seed and see that it gets in the hands of people in depressed countries. After the supplies get overseas, churches take over the distribution to rural people.

The token Dr. Russell received is an 8 by 10-inch bronze plaque. It reads in part "... with deep appreciation to Dr. Daniel Russell for dedicated leadership in the Texas Rural Overseas Program."

As part of his contribution to the program, Dr. Russell accompanied a shipment of dairy cattle to Germany in 1953. Included in his other travels was a 1954 trip to Haiti.

He is presently senior advisor of the Texas program.

Board Okays Steps For More Pines

A&M's Board of Directors Saturday approved steps expected to double production of pine seedlings by the Texas Forest Service.

The board confirmed a contract awarded prior to the meeting for a temporary irrigation system at the new TFS Nursery at Magnolia Springs, 12 miles west of Kirbyville.

The irrigation, with 30-acre capacity, will water about 20 million seedlings and eventually be extended to 50 million seedlings annually.

The additional seedling production is aimed at partially taking the slack out of high seedling demand due to rapid growth of forest industries, soil bank plantings and commercial timber production.

'57 Water Course

The annual Water and Sewage short course will be held here from March 3-8, in the Memorial Student Center. Six hundred and fifty people are due to attend. Joe H. Sorrels of the Civil Engineering Department will be the chairman of the course.

Heat Engineers To Hear Richards

W. E. Richards, manager of staff employment for the Trane Company of LaCrosse, Wisc., will speak to the American Society of Heating and Air Conditioning Engineers tonight at 7:30.

FSA Chapel Gifts

A $7,000 gift from Association of Former Student for furnishings in the $250,000 Interfaith Chapel was approved for acceptance by the Board of Directors Saturday.

The gift brings the total from the former students to $223,000. Other board action calls for speed up in construction so it will be finished by May. Furnishings are expected to be in by late May or early summer.

Approximately $15,200 worth of chairs, carpeting and miscellaneous furniture and equipment are now on order. A church model organ, provided by J. Harold Dunn of Amarillo will be installed in the chapel as a memorial to the late Dr. Thomas F. Mayo, college librarian and professor of English from 1916 to 1944 and head of A&M English Department from 1944 to 1952.

I Understand He Owns A National College Life Contract

No one could understand how Glotz The Undesirable One found favor with so many women. . . . Admittedly he lacked those physical traits which ordinarily attract the weaker sex, but still his name was legend in the girl's dorms and sorority houses.

Glotz, however, was not selfish. One day he made his secret known. "You see," he said grinning modestly, "I own a National College Life Contract; therefore my economic future is secure and the girls know it . . ."

Take note of his words, friends. They are wisely spoken.

National College Life offers you an excellent investment and savings plan which is tailored to your situation. Only college students are eligible. Also, deposits may be deferred until you graduate and begin earning an income. Get the word on the National College Life plan from your campus representative today!
