

High School Drama Group Presents One-Act Play For Campus Study Club

Campus Study Club members enjoyed a one-act play by students of the A&M Consolidated High School Drama Group at their Tuesday afternoon meeting.

Students participating were Patricia Jackson, Susan Dowell, Carolyn Wilson, Steadman Davis, Billy Kavanaugh and John Hamner.

In addition to the play, a reading, "The Golden Pitcher," was given by Ann Hite, and Charles Gentry read a poem, "The Winged Man," by Stephen Vincent Benet.

Mrs. Eugene Rush, director of the play, outlined to the club the work the students are doing. Mrs. Bardin H. Nelson, president, conducted the business meeting.

Mrs. W. S. Allen, the club's delegate to the Fourth District meeting of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs in Houston March 4-5, reported the highlights of that convention.

She also announced that the district will sponsor a luncheon and style show April 5 at the Rice Hotel. Purpose of the affair will be to raise money for benefit of the Dorothy House Vieman Oriental Scholarship Fund.

The style show will be given by Battelstein's, with models to be members of various clubs in the Fourth District. Any members wishing to attend may call Mrs. Allen or Mrs. Nelson for reservations.

Mrs. Nelson announced that the Campus Study Club press book was awarded second place in Division I, class C, of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, Fourth District. The book, prepared by Mrs. Leo Ogg and Mrs. Price Hobgood, was placed on display.

Miss Mary Lou Ergle was selected to represent the club as duchess at the Cotton Ball, with Miss Margaret Anderson as alternate.

Aggie Landscape Architects Take Award In Houston Show

A display designed and constructed by A&M landscape architecture students took the sweepstakes ribbon in its class in the Houston International Flower Show being held this week.

The general layout for the display, built about a theme of black, white and aluminum, was designed by Jack Daft, senior from Houston.

Rounding out the display team were Bert Bradford and J. B. Riddle of Fort Worth, Wayne Branch of Dallas, James Cooper of Bandera and Larry Wester of Terrell.

Highlights of the display were large colored aluminum and redwood plant boxes, aluminum hanging baskets, aluminum and redwood lights and an aluminum and concrete mosaic.

The exhibit was basically an L-shaped garden with one wall of aluminum and the other of white plaster. These walls were supported by an exposed framework painted flat black.

The overhead structure consisted of three aluminum vaults supported on black uprights. A raised wooden deck filled the corner. Along one wall was a black pool trimmed in aluminum and along the other, a graveled area with a large aluminum bowl of yellow mums. In front of the graveled area a mass of white geraniums was planted.

The display was completed with yellow mums in the hanging baskets over the pool and the blue and redwood plant boxes.
