VOTING

zens of a community or a state feel that they are too busy to deal with political issues, the gangsters and thugs in the community will be only too happy to take over the government. They have done this in many communities.

The intelligent voter must do more than be impressed by names and parrot inane slogans. He must learn something about the candidates and the things they stand for. Several years ago in Texas a man ran for a state office after having changed his name to that of a well-known political family. Late in the campaign the court took the new name from him and he had to withdraw from the race.

However, the ballots had been printed and the name remained for consideration by the voters. The papers made a great deal of the story, but the man received more than 100,000 votes. These 100,000 voters were not voting intelligently.

An educated citizen has the responsibility of voting and voting intelligently. To do this you must be influenced by something more than a familiar name, a slogan, or the fact that the man lives in your part of the country or the campus.

Democracy, on the campus and in the nation, demands that you give elections both time and intelligent study.

Cost of Living Brings Added Riots to Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile, (AP) — Street mobs fought soldiers and police in the heart of Chile's capital yesterday in renewed rioting against the runaway cost of living.

From 40 to 70 persons are unofficially estimated to have been killed and more than 200 injured in a week-long wave of disorder that has caused property damage in excess of two million dollars.

Defying emergency military law clamped on the entire nation, truckloads of rioters from the outlying poorer sections joined in today's demonstrations to complain of a new spurt in the inflation spiral which has gone steadily upward in Chile since World War II.

About 1,000 Chileans attacked police and army troops.
