CHS Schedules Pet Show Saturday At Tiger Field.

By TOBY MATTOX
Snakes, kittens, dogs of all shapes and sizes, sheep, horses, horned larks, hamsters and guinea pigs are expected to be present for the annual Pet and Dog Show at Consolidated's Tiger Field Saturday to raise money for unbudgeted school projects, according to publicity chairman Ron Logan.

"More than 200 entrants are expected in the A&M Consolidated Schools Mothers and Dads Club sponsored project," Logan said.

"Tickets for the show will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children," J. K. Riggs, general chairman, said. "The proceeds will be used for the same projects that we have been supporting all year, including new band uniforms and sidewalks for the school grounds."

The groups in which one may enter are pure bred dogs, "Heinz variety dogs," cats, rabbits, fowls and birds, fish, turtles, and miscellaneous, large pets and FFA projects.

Anyone in College Station or this area may enter pets in the contest by bringing them to Tiger Field by 4:30 Saturday afternoon, April 6.

Additional attractions include a concession stand and novelty shop. The concession stand will be run by the A&M Military Science Department.

Chemistry Expert To Speak Tonight

Dr. Edward S. Amis, professor of physical chemistry at the University of Arkansas, will speak on "Electrostatics and Chemical Reaction Rates and Mechanism" tonight at 8 in the Chemistry lecture room.

Dr. Amis has devoted his time primarily to graduate teaching and research and has conducted research in glass electrodes, viscosities, densities and refractive indexes of pure organic substances and their mixtures, kinetics of reactions in isocomposition and isodielectric solvents, kinetics of reactions between ions and dipolar molecules and fluoro-carbons.

Wives Council Works Toward Polio Program

Members of the Aggies Wives Council have contacted the local chapter of the American Medical Association in connection with trying to set up mass polio inoculation of Aggie Wives.

A committee has been set up by the local chapter of the AMA to study the possibilities of making the serum available at cost to Aggies and their wives, but so far the committee has not made a report.

Several doctors have volunteered their support and will be responsible for administering the shots if the program gets the go-ahead signal from the AMA.

The Wives Council will meet at the home of Mrs. Robert Kamm Monday night at 8.

Several important issues in addition to the polio campaign will be discussed Monday night, including the possibility of getting permission for night classes to be taught at A&M to local women for college credit.

FSA Designs Added Benefits For Faculty

Former Student Association President Louis Bloodworth told the local AAUP chapter of a new financial program that could lead to increased benefits for faculty members.

Called the A&M College Foundation, the fund is set aside from the college and the FSA. Although the fund will help in the scholarship program, principal is being built so the fund can contribute, from the interest, to endowed chairs and professorships.

Bloodworth said he realized that faculty members could easily become discouraged when they saw a student began employment at a salary it took them years to attain. "You must be dedicated people or you wouldn't be doing this," he said.

As another aim of the FSA, Bloodworth said they hoped to increase the number of $1,000 Faculty Achievement Awards that are given annually.

6 Poultry Majors Trying For Team

Six poultry science majors have been hard at work the past few weeks hoping to capture a place on the Junior Poultry Judging Team.

Four of the six will be chosen for the team and represent A&M at the Mississippi State College Poultry judging contest April 25 and 26. Nine land grant colleges will enter competing teams.

Trying for places on A&M's team are Carl Armstrong, Ken Holleman, Bill Benson, Clint Her-ring, David Behlen and Bill McCoy.

The team will be picked about April 13 after a couple of intra-team contests.

Area III Contest Slated Next Week

More than 350 high school agriculture students will gather on the campus Saturday, April 13, for the Area III Future Farmer elimination contests.

The contests, held annually prior to the state meet which will be held here May 4, will decide the winners in each of the five major divisions and who will represent the Area in state competition.

Divisions in the contest include Livestock, Dairy, Poultry, Meats and Milk Products Judging.

The contestants represent 20 counties stretching from Hearne to the Gulf Coast and bounded by Wharton and Montgomery counties on the east and west.
