

New Jordan Head In Solid Control

AMMAN, Jordan, (AP)—Jordan's new government, which is expected to turn this Middle Eastern kingdom aside from its drift toward the Arab pro-Soviet camp, appeared to be in solid control yesterday.

Tough Bedouin troops and security police, who supported 21-year-old King Hussein when he placed his crown on the line at the height of Jordan's six-day political crisis, maintained strict order.

All was quiet except in Jordan-held Old Jerusalem and Nablus, where minor demonstrations were reported. A few persons were injured in Jerusalem where some Leftist students staged a parade and were attacked by members of the Moslem Brotherhood.

The new government of Premier Hussein Fakhri Khalidi, which took office Monday, is expected to carry out a swift cleanup of pro-Communist elements who had infiltrated the government, schools and army during the regime of ex-Premier Suleiman Nabulsi.

Amman sympathizers of the elements expected to be purged have been warned not to start any disturbances.

One sign of the drift in future affairs may be seen in whether King Hussein now issues a firm invitation to James P. Richards, President Eisenhower's Special envoy who is in the Middle East explaining the President's plans for military and economic assistance to governments which oppose communism. The new regime's fate may depend largely on the outside economic aid it receives.

Nabulsi, who is foreign minister in the new government, had not issued such an invitation. While premier he declared he would not sign any agreement with U. S. aid if he had to commit himself to fighting communism. His government also had started proceedings to engage in full diplomatic relations with Moscow, something Jordan never has done before.

Nabulsi's policy seemed to contradict the King's demands that the government fight Communist propaganda and subversion. Hussein requested and got the resignation of Nabulsi's Cabinet, which included a Communist and a Leftist sympathizer.

Record Setting B-47 Coming Here

The B-47 which set a new trans-continental speed record last January 25, flying from March AFB, California, to L. G. Hanscom Field in Bedford, Mass., will land at Bryan AFB on April 26 and remain for a three-day display.

Purpose of the visit is to coordinate research activities concerning high level jet stream observation and research with members of the A&M Department of Oceanography and Meteorology. Representatives of the department will meet the plane at the base.

Air Force crew members who manned the plane on the record-breaking excursion will bring the plane to Bryan from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. They are Maj. Mont J. Smith, pilot; Lt. Haydon Y. Grubbs, co-pilot; and Capt. Charles S. Hawkins, navigator.

Radio To Tell Of Opportunity Awards at A&M

Twenty-seven Texas radio stations will begin broadcasting a 13-week series of 15-minute programs this month entitled "Investment in Tomorrow," dealing with Opportunity Awards at A&M.

In the Bryan-College Station area, Radio Station WTAW will carry the stories of individual winners starting April 24, and each Wednesday thereafter at 12 noon for 12 weeks.

These academic scholarships have given 815 Texas boys a chance at a college education during the past 11 years. The awards are four-year scholarships worth from $200 to $400 each year, plus a part-time job.

About 75 to 90 of these awards are available each spring. The winners are chosen from a competitive field of some 400 or 500 top high school students.

Opportunity Awards are financed by foundations, business and industrial organizations, the Association of Former Students, A&M Mothers' Clubs and interested individuals throughout Texas.

Of the 815 recipients of the scholarships so far, more than 95 percent have either graduated from college or they are still in the process of completing their degree.

Dames Club will hold its regular meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the YMCA. A social will follow the business meeting. Refreshments will be served by the hostesses for the evening, Judy Chapman and Donna Baugh.

Senate Probers Find Union 'Goon' Tactics

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate rackets investigators yesterday unfolded a story of dynamiting, threats, beatings and use of imported armed "goons" to enforce the will of union officials in the Scranton, Pa., area.

Arnold Schiavi, owner of a bakery, related to the senators that "very foul language" telephone calls to him and his wife during a drive by the Teamsters Union to organize his truck drivers even included the implied threat that his children would be run down by automobiles unless he knuckled under.

The names coming into the hearing were chiefly those of union officials—these were not confined to the Teamsters Union—but there was brief mention of James T. Hanlon, Democratic mayor of Scranton.

Paul Bradshaw, a convicted dynamiter and former steward of the Scranton Teamsters local, testified that Hanlon asked him to "hold off" disclosures about other union officials until after an election.

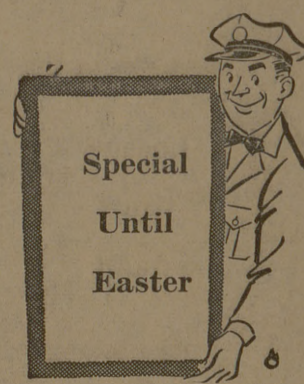

The senators did not immediately develop detailed testimony about this or even bring out what election Bradshaw referred to.

Bradshaw later told reporters the reference was to the 1955 spring primary election. He said Hanlon wasn't up for election himself then, having been elected in 1953 for a four-year term.
