Final Review Marks Year's End

2nd Time Around Honors Seniors

By JOE BUSER

A solemn group of seniors will take their places tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 to salute their outfits as they march by. Tomorrow is their last day at A&M; the review, their Final Review.

Final Review is one of A&M's most cherished traditions. It is a time of mixed emotions for all classes. For the underclassmen, it means adding a class, a new job and new responsibilities. For the graduating seniors it means leaving the "West Point on the Brazos" and joining the long Maroon and White line that stretches around the world. The familiar strains of "The War Hymn" and "Final Review Medley" will ring in their ears long after their spurs have rusted and their boots have lost their shine. A&M is more than a school; it's a brotherhood of men, working for a common goal and it does not end with graduation.

The review, will be in two parts, as in the past. The "first time around" will be in honor of Maj. Gen. Gabriel P. Disosway, commander of Flying Training Air Force, Waco, who is presenting the Air Force commissions. The review will follow regular review procedure except for the omission of "Officers and Colors Front."

After a short break, for the underclassmen to don the uniform of their new class and the seniors to form the two lines in front of the reviewing stand, the second half of the review will begin. As the units pass in review, the seniors will salute their outfit and thereby join the long Maroon and White line.

Zuckero Improves As Donations Rise

Vic Zuckero, senior in "B" Field Artillery, stricken with spinal meningitis May 14, is showing gradual improvement, said Dr. J. E. Marsh, Jr., of St. Joseph's Hospital.

The senior was attacked by the disease while participating in intramurals over two weeks ago.

Zuckero, whose family farm is under water as a result of the recent floods, has had $1,351 raised for him by the combined efforts of his fellow Aggies and the Skyway Drive-In Theatre.

The original plan called for the Aggies to donate $600, but the goal was soon reached and then passed to the tune of $1,300. The Skyway donated half their gate last night to the fund adding another $51.

Zuckero's recovery is very costly with hospital expenses climbing $100 per day.

T. R. Ellison and R. M. Jackson were chosen to represent Ramp 1; M. G. Maher and R. F. Wright, Ramp 2; James Clark and F. L. Becker, Ramp 3; L. Robinson and J. E. Reynolds, Ramp 4 and W. D. Sevier, Ramp 5.

The graduation exercises will close with the entire audience singing the CHS school song.

Water Could Be Dangerous To Manhole Wires

Any large amount of water which might run into the electric manhole in front of Duncan Mess Hall could cause a great deal of damage, J. K. Walter, superintendent of Building & College Utilities said yesterday.

The manhole, which houses a junction box from the power plant for all the dorms in the new Corps area, was short-circuited Wednesday night shortly after midnight, leaving the area without lights for several hours. Temporary repairs have been made on the wiring, but water standing in the manhole could result in more damage.

"The explosion and short circuit Wednesday night were definitely not caused by water in the hole, but by a short circuit on the service line to dorm 12," Walker said.

The explosion, which split the 200 pound, 1 1/4 inch castiron cover for the hole in front of the mess hall lit up the area momentarily with an orange flame.

Summer Recreation Plan Ready For CS Residents

Plenty of recreation of all types for young and old is in store for College Station residents this summer as the 1957 Summer Recreation Program gets underway June 3.

Swimming, tennis, tumbling, golf, baseball, pre-school, bowling, reading and community picnics are featured attractions of the program, according to the College Station Recreation Council. The council is sponsored jointly by the College Station Civic Association, College Station Community Chest, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club and the City of College Station.

This summer's program is split up into two six-week sessions instead of one eight-week session as held in the past. The change was made to enable more people to participate in the program and allow everyone to join in the recreation of his choice.

Preference for enrollment in the second session will be given those who did not have a chance to get in the program of their choice the first term. The program is scheduled so that it will not interfere with camps and schools strongly attended by College Station young people.

Activities and sports are arranged on an age level, and in most sports, classes will be taught on levels from beginners through advanced. There will also be a competitive swimming team which all who are interested in competition and are good swimmers may try out for.

Fees of a small amount will be charged for the courses, but the sponsors pay for approximately TIGHTENING THE LAST BOLT on one of the fuses in the electrical junction box in front of Duncan Mess Hall which was short circuited Wednesday night is George Carroll, of the B&CU Department.

Civilians Support Non-Compulsory

Civilian Student Council members supported the present non-compulsory Corps system last night and sent their opinion on to the A&M Board of Directors.

The Council was asked to give its opinion by President D. W. Williams as a part of a report to the Board on feelings and facts about the present system.

This action by the Civilian group follows close on the heels of a vote by the Academic Council of the College strongly favoring the non-compulsory system.

Expression of the opinions are part of an effort by the Board of Directors to learn information to aid them in coming to a decision whether or not the present Corps system will be abolished and compulsory Corps instituted.

Council members also made a positive step toward solving the Civilian junior, senior and graduate seating on Kyle Field by sending their recommendation to the Student Senate.

They suggested that the Senate allow Civilian juniors, seniors and graduates to be given colored tickets for the classes. These tickets would be in five sections, four of which would be torn off at each of the four home games. The specifically marked tickets would be taken up at the classes' ramp entrance and given back if a student wanted to leave the ramp for some reason.

The fifth section of the ticket would name the ticket and include the student's signature. These would be used in addition to regular season tickets.

Seniors Eligible For Fee Refund

Vote By Schools Chooses Senate

If John Hoffman meets all necessary qualifications, he will be the first candidate for a student office winning on write-in votes "as far as I know," said W. D. (Pete) Hardesty, of Student Activities yesterday.

Hoffman was running for junior representative to the Student Senate from the School of Veterinary Medicine. He received 12 write-ins in yesterday's election as compared to the 10 votes collected by Vannis Redman, who will win if Hoffman doesn't qualify.

Hardesty was to investigate Hoffman's record this morning. Some of the requirements for a seat in the Senate are: a student must have an overall grade point ratio of 1.00, he must have attended A&M for at least the two previous semesters, he must live in the dormitory or area he represents and he must be willing and expect to serve two semesters.

William C. Wafer, School of Veterinary Medicine, acquired 11 votes to gain the senior position on the Senate and Lloyd B. Sells received eight for the sophomore slot.
