National Honor Society, More Open To Fish

Three academic honors are open to A&M freshmen, including an honor society of their own.

The honor society is Phi Eta Sigma, national honor society for freshmen. Its purpose is to "encourage and reward scholarship among freshmen."

A grade point ratio of 2.5 in either the first semester or the first year of college work is required. (This means a B plus average.)

Although membership in the society is for life, the active Phi Eta Sigma chapter is composed of sophomore members only.

At the present, total membership in school is more than 200 persons.

To qualify as a distinguished student a person must have no grade below C at the end of the semester, have completed at least 16 semester hours, and have a grade point ratio of not less than 2.25.

The distinguished student list is made up at the end of each semester and a person named on the list receives a card entitling him to miss any class in which an announced test has not been scheduled.

The distinguished student list covers all four classes.

Alpha Zeta, national honorary agricultural fraternity, recognizes annually the five highest freshmen agricultural students with their Alpha Zeta Freshman Award.

A special award is presented at the School of Agriculture's Spring Banquet to the student who is considered the outstanding freshman in the School of Agriculture. The awards are based on grades and other activities indicating leadership ability.

Players to Plan First Production

Aggie Players, dramatic club, begin preparing for their first play, "The Hasty Heart", opening Nov. 4, at their organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Music Hall.

Players president Bob Wenck invites all students and non-students interested to attend the first reading of the play.

The Aggie Players is an Aggie-sponsored community project.
