

"PRINCE" CHARLIE MILSTEAD is the sophomore contender of the quarterback position, a member of the triumvirate. Milstead is an engineering major from Tyler.

Man Under Strongest Single Team Spot

If a poll was taken to name the top three quarterbacks in the Southwest Conference, they might all be Texas Aggies.

Quarterback is the strongest position on the squad this year with three capable field generals in brisk competition for a starting nod.

At the beginning of last year's fall practice Coach Bryant announced the search had begun for an able man-under.

Roddy Osborne, a fullback transfer, filled the position so capably he was elected unanimously to the all-conference team. Whenever he had possession of the football he was a constant threat.

Roddy is probably the quickest man in the conference and is a tremendous runner. The opposition had to stop Roddy from running with the ball before they could concentrate on stopping other Aggie mail-carriers.

Although his passing was not the best, the Aggie-type of attack was not suited for passing. When the Aggies passed, it came as a surprise and sometimes netted a touchdown.

Osborne is a senior two-year letterman from Gainesville. As a freshman and sophomore, he alternated between halfback and fullback and should Wright or Milstead dislodge him from his starting role, he may be shifted to a deep back position.

Roddy is a running quarterback, second in rushing to John Crow. He performs the option as well as anyone in the nation.

Jimmy Wright is the senior passing ace from Edinburg that "ran" for the first time last spring. In 1956, he shared the signal-calling chore with Osborne and connected in eight of twelve passing attempts for a .667 percentage.

As a sophomore his record was a little more impressive. He heaved six touchdown passes, including one that busted up the 1955 Rice game. But last spring, he showed such remarkable improvement that many believed he could take over the driver's seat from Osborne. Jimmy has lettered twice.

To further muddy the situation, much to Bryant's delight, the rising star of last year's freshman squad wants Osborne's job.

Charlie Milstead of Tyler was the outstanding prep high school back in Texas before coming to A&M. Even though he missed action in some of the frosh games, he was still chosen as the quarterback on the all-conference freshman team.

Milstead is an all-purpose player. He can do anything. In spring training he kicked field goals, passed and ran for touchdowns and put a gleam in Coach Bryant's eye.

In spring drills, Aggie fans were given a preview of what would be this fall. Osborne, Wright and Milstead ran a neck-and-neck race. All performed so capably that nobody knew who was first-ranked.

All three players have announced their intention to start in the Maryland game and Osborne is temporarily Bryant choice because of his past performance.

The man-under situation resembles the leadership problem in the Soviet Union. One day you're a first-string prime minister and the next day you're the third-string "salt miner."

JOHN GILBERT is the only experienced center the Aggies have for the upcoming season. Gilbert will be the number one center during this, his last year at A&M.

GALE OLIVER, from Refugio, will be showing what he learned as a freshman at the center post this year for the Aggies. Oliver was a letterman on the Fish team last year.
