

Squadron 23 Being Formed For Civilians

Squadron 23, an organization for men desiring to be in the corps but who do not have a contract, is now being organized. It will be a part of the First Group, First Wing and will be housed in Dorm 9.

"Interviews for commanding officer of the outfit will be held next week," said Gary Lemmon, commander of the First Group. "The outfit will pick three men to be interviewed and we will choose the C.O. from these three."

Edward W. Wyatt, who commanded Squadron 19 last year, is acting as commanding officer until a permanent C.O. can be chosen. Col. Percy Goff, tactical officer, has set a minimum of 40 men in order to start the outfit. The roster presently has only 27. Those interested in joining the outfit should contact Wyatt in Dorm 9, Room 213.

"We will participate in all corps activities," Wyatt said. "We feel that this outfit should finish high in the running for the General Moore Award because all the men in the outfit believe in the corps and really want to make the outfit click."

Gary Rollins

Football Manager To Sports Editor

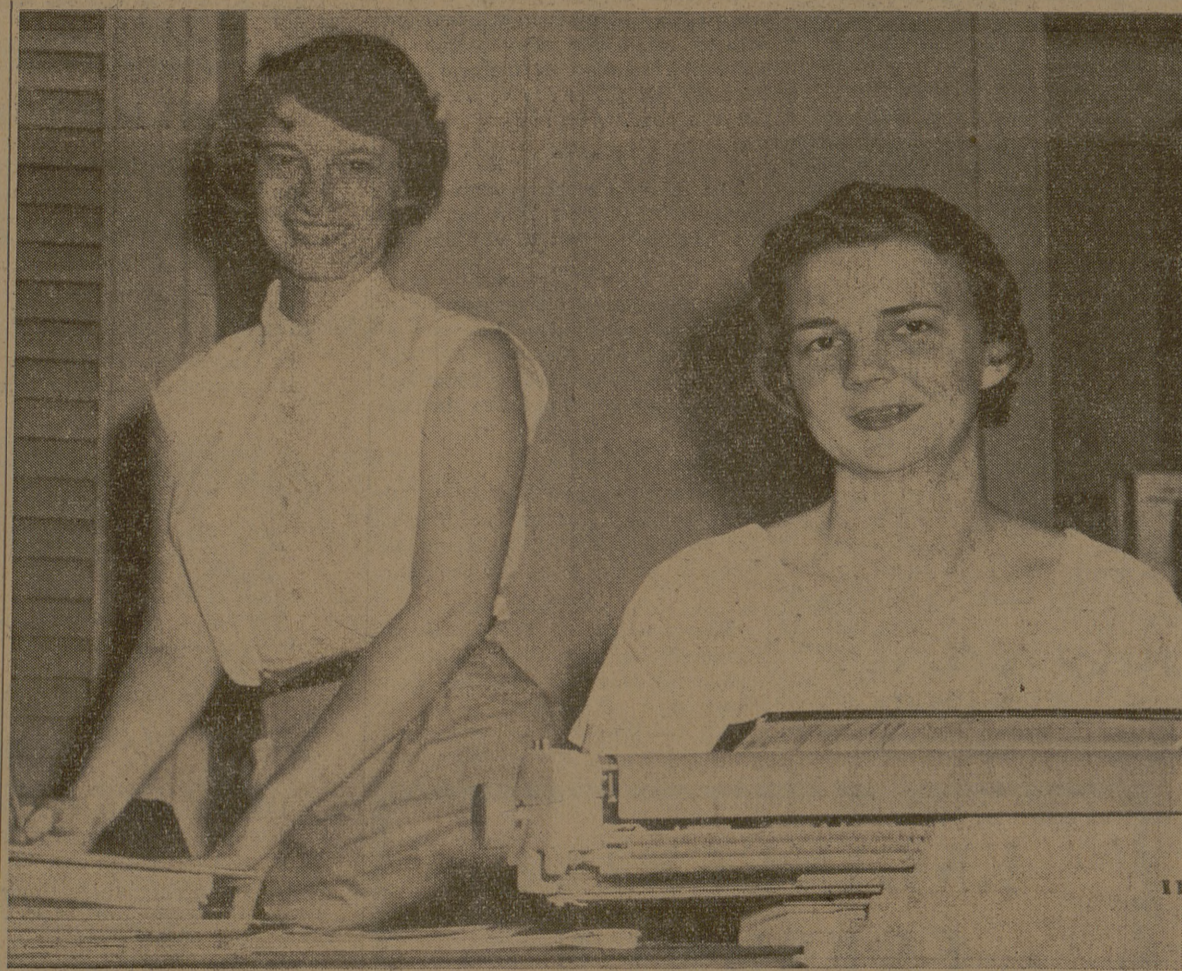

Gary Rollins, new Battalion sports editor, has hung up his cleats after three years as a football manager to cover campus sports events.

Known as the thinnest member of the "T" Association, Rollins now puts all his 143 pounds into turning out the sports pages of The Battalion instead of wrestling football dummies.

His aim, as sports editor for this year, is to "give fair coverage to all intercollegiate athletics, both major and minor sports."

A former head cheerleader for San Jacinto High School Golden Bears in Houston, he is no stranger to the sidelines. Rollins was sports editor of his high school newspaper, the San Jacinto Star.

For three years all his time during football season was taken up with managing. For the rest of the year, when not taking inventory or performing some other managerial duty, he tutored and was on the 2nd Battalion, 2nd Regiment Staff last year.

Long Range Water Program Stressed At Water Meeting

The need for developing a progressive, long range state water program was stressed yesterday to some 100 delegates of the third annual Water for Texas Conference in the Memorial Student Center.

"It is clearly up to the people to see that one is developed and executed," said J. R. Johnston of Bushland, Texas area director for the U. S. Department of Agriculture's soil and water management research branch.

The conference, which ends tonight, drew more than 100 farmers, ranchers, engineers and officials from all parts of the state. Theme for the conference is "What is Happening to Our Water?"

"Water Storage Changes During 1957" was the topic of yesterday morning's opening session, and "Runoff and Evaporation" was the main point of the afternoon session.

A Houston builder, Howard Tellepsen, warned last night that failure of Texas to develop its water could imperil national security and at the same time see a stagnation of industrial growth in the state.

"Without proper water development, we could see our national security imperiled and I'm firmly convinced water has not been as important in the past as it is in the future. The key to the solution is action," Tellepsen told the group.

Texas is doing something about the water problem, however, it was pointed out at the meeting. With the federal government's cooperation which is forthcoming, a change may be near.

"There may be a turning point in the state now, because I believe the U. S. Corps of Engineers and Bureau of Reclamation wish to cooperate more than ever before," said R. M. Dixon, chairman of the state Board of Water Engineers.

Also, a state master water plan is one of Gov. Price Daniel's recommendations for the Oct. 14 special session of the Texas Legislature.

"General Survey of Present Storage Reservoirs in Texas and Contemplated Additions" was reported

Aggies Asked To Help Teach Scout Troops

Aggies who formerly have been in scouting and who wish to continue their work with young men now have the opportunity to do so, declared C. M. Loyd, assistant district commissioner of the Boy Scouts of America.

Loyd said Aggies were needed to assist various scout organizations in this district either as an assistant scoutmaster, scout or just as a specialist who can teach his specialty to the scouts.

Anyone interested in the jobs may be interviewed by Loyd in his office in Room 307 of the Physics building each morning from 8 to 10. Loyd said he could use any executive who was interested in such a job.

New explorer and sea scout units are being organized which will need the help of specialists as well of good assistant scoutmasters. These specialists may be in anything from camp cookery to leather craft.

Court To Call 200 Witnesses In Race Hearing

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — (AP) The federal government, moving toward a critical test of strength with Gov. Orval Faubus, drew up a list of some 200 witnesses yesterday for Friday's court hearing on his use of armed troops to block integration in a Little Rock high school.

Advice and appeals swept in on Faubus as the zero hour neared. He conferred twice with Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark), who is trying to find a formula, acceptable to both Faubus and the federal government, for ending the powder keg racial struggle in Little Rock.

While they were talking, Mayor Woodrow Wilson Mann in a formal message appealed to Faubus to take the National Guard from Central High School where the soldiers have stood—with orders to bar Negroes—since the night of Sept. 2.

A source close to the governor pictured him as a man working "from hour to hour" to determine his next step. "I am sure that the governor himself, at this moment, has not decided his course of action," the informant said.
