

Art for Aggies' Sake

By WELTON JONES

With no fanfare at all, we will launch into the topic for today: Audiences at A&M. A long-festering pet peeve of this column, the situation here was brought to a head at the Town Hall performance of the Four Freshmen Tuesday night.

The group who attended, spread thinly through the vastness of G. Rollie White Coliseum, were not, to say the least, a perfect audience. They harassed the performers unduly, this column thought, they coughed excessively and, worst of all, left in droves at the wrong times.

Performers of the Four Freshmen's caliber, of course, are past being rattled by a poor audience. But any entertainer varies somewhat in direct proportion to the reactions of the group in attendance.

And any entertainers will doubtless feel it when the audience, after intermission, starts what must seem like a wholesale migration out.

That's what intermissions are designed for.

In the past, A&M audiences (made up not only of students) have been often characterized by both lack of courtesy and excessive exuberance. They have been called "honest" groups who let a performer know what they think.

Be that as it may. There are, nevertheless, those whose evening can be fully destroyed by members of this "honest" audience.

It is on the behalf of these that this column makes an appeal to audiences at A&M. Two old clichés say it best, perhaps; "Do unto others as you would have them do to you" and "If you can't say something good, say nothing."

Remember these, express your enthusiasm at the right time and leave at the intermissions. Thanks.
