Four Aggie poultry judges will make up a team representing A&M in a National Collegiate Poultry Judging Contest to be held in Chicago, Dec. 31-4, E. D. Parnell, team coach, announced this week. Seven poultry science majors are holding workouts twice weekly in preparation for the contest. Four of the seven will make up the team. Practice work includes the selection of poultry breeding stock, placing of laying hens against trapnet records, grading of eggs and of live and dressed market poultry. Practice sessions are held at the college poultry farm, nearby processing plants and at county and district fair poultry shows. Seniors competing for places on the team are Carl Armstrong, David Behlen, William Benson, Clint Herring, Ken Holleman, Billy McCoy and Harold Muller.
