

Art for Aggies' Sake

BY WELTON JONES

This seventh week of school now completed, this column finds a very excellent cultural season nearing maturity. Several local groups and series have brought outstanding entertainment to local stages and promise more of the same.

The coming week, for instance, will bring a good example of this, including the first date conflict of the year.

DRAMA—First on the agenda for next week will be the Aggie Players' three night run of "The Hasty Heart", which opens on the Memorial Student Center stage Monday night.

The play and its cast have been adequately noted in these pages for the past few weeks and now there seems little more that this column should add.

The play itself is certainly engaging material, or at least that part exposed to this column. The cast, while somewhat short on experience, is long on desire, as a sports writer might say. And dominating it all is the organizational genius of C. K. Esten, who, as director for the Players, seems to have a knack for making quite a bit out of next to nothing.

At any rate, one could do much worse than to take a chance and purchase a view of this effort.

VARIETY—Next week also heralds the arrival here Tuesday night of a package of performers which should bring joy to the heart of the most discerning modern music fan.

Appearing under the auspices of the Student Activities Department, but not in connection with the Town Hall series, will be Carmen McRae, the Hi-Los and the orchestra of Ted Heath. Admission will be $2 and $2.50, reserved and $1.25 general admission.

Miss McRae, a singer in the best tradition of Billie Holiday, Sarah Vaughn and Ella Fitzgerald, is a native of Jamaica. She appears on records made by the Decca Company.

A rising young vocal group, the Hi-Los seem to have taken over harmonic quartet sound experiments left off some years ago. They also record (on Columbia) and have many radio and television appearances to their credit.

Ted Heath and his organization were warmly received here last year when they backed Nat Cole in a show. Reportedly some of their fondest memories are of Texas and of A&M. At any rate, the group, which is an institution in Great Britain, is back this year on another exchange tour.

BALLET—To range slightly out of local territory, another British institution will appear in Houston next weekend for five performances, in the personage of The Royal Ballet, or, as it was known until this year, The Sadler's Wells Ballet.

The incomparable Margot Fonteyn will be in the midst of her 15th season as prima ballerina for the company, and will be backed by such notables as Michael Somes, Rowena Jackson, Svetlana Beriosova and many others.
