More Liberals

Yesterday Virginia's attorney general J. Lindsay Almond Jr. was elected governor with backing from Democratic Sen. Harry F. Byrd, who has called for "massive resistance" to school integration.

Men like Byrd and Almond, if he shares Byrd's views, are no more Democrats than the late Sen. Robert Taft.

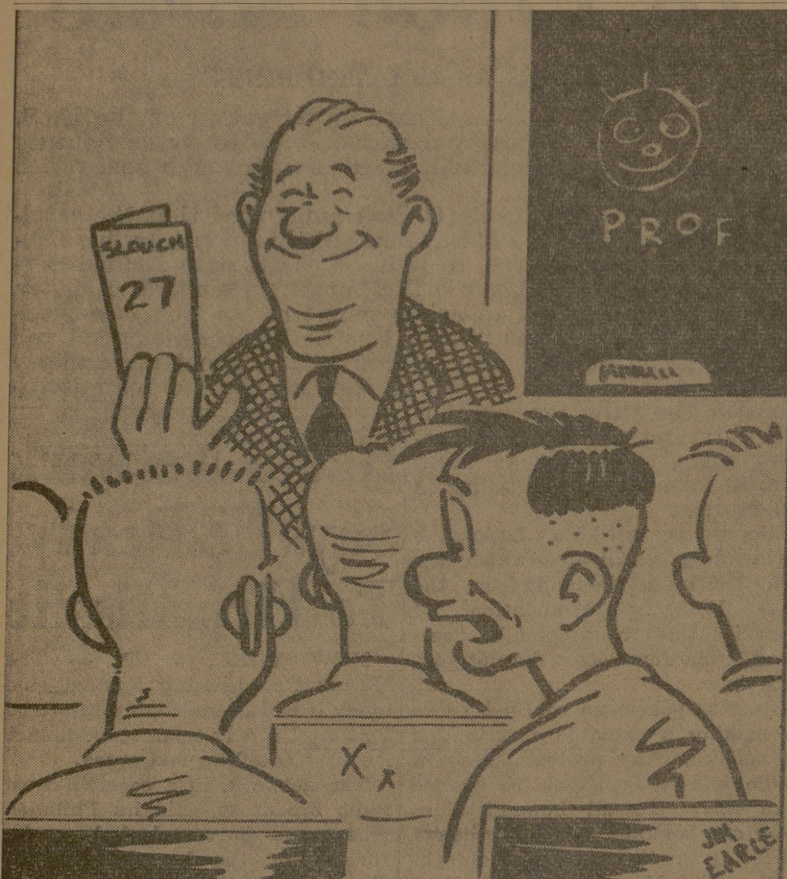

The national Democratic Party in the past has repeatedly stood for the rights of all men, no matter what race, color or creed they happen to have.

Neither is our present Democratic Congress a true example of the party of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman. It is controlled by Southern conservatives who seem to ignore the law of the land and continue to support conservative measures.

This is an age in which we need positive action which only a liberal Congress and President can give us.

Actually Eisenhower "modern Republicanism" is closer to the ideology of the national Democratic party than the beliefs of the Southern senators. It, in many instances, follows the New Deal-Fair Deal doctrines.

In 1960, we need a liberal nominee for President like Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) or Gov. Robert Meyner (D-N.J.). In Congress we need more men like Sen. Paul Douglas, (D-Ill.) and Sen. Wayne Morse, (D-Ore.).

'Best Show So Far'

Heath Group Thrills Audience

By WELTON JONES

The superlative musicians almost outnumbered the members of the audience in G. Rollie White Coliseum last night, when Student Activities presented Ted Heath's orchestra, Carmen McRae and the Hi-Los.

Although they undoubtedly took a financial licking, the three acts never showed they were aware of the sparseness of the crowd, and turned in probably the best total performance of any entertainment here so far this year.

Heath's organization, on its third American tour arranged as an exchange between the U.S. and British musician's unions, seemed even improved over their appearance last year on the program with Nat "King" Cole.

Miss McRae, billed as a singer with a "haunt" in her voice, also had a slight cough, but showed the range of her versatility with songs such as "Moonlight in Vermont," "A Foggy Day" and her own "Skyliner."

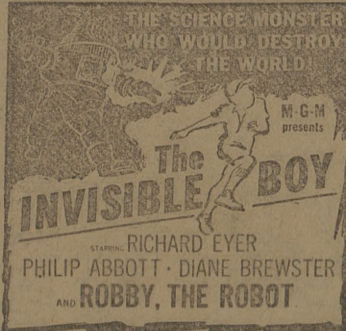

The Hi-Los showed a much warmer and personal side than they usually do on their records. Featuring their modern sound and the extraordinary range of their tenor, the group sang many of their trademark songs in an engaging manner.

But it was Heath who stole the show, with his driving rhythm, crisp brass and tight arrangements. The tremendous sound and feeling generated by this group make it seem that Britain, rather than the U.S., invented swing.

 The Battalion

I suppose that ever since the first class graduated from A&M the feeling has been among the graduating seniors that things would surely go down the drain very soon—that worthwhile traditions would very soon disappear.

Somehow though, the many fine traditions have lived on—but one, I fear, is in danger—and that is the reception of the Aggie football team when they return from out of town games. Saturday night at 9, the No. 1 team in the nation returned home to College Station. They were greeted at Easterwood Airport by one gasoline truck, several airport employees and some 75 Aggies. Congratulations to those who were present. You are the vestiges of crowds of 2 to 3 thousand who, with the band used to greet returning Aggie elevens when they were not even rated in national polls. To me, it was a sickening sight to see an Aggie team greeted by such a dismal display.

Once again, congratulations to the 75 Aggies who turned out to welcome home a great team.

Where were all the others?

Men in the know know true from false

College graduates who make the most money have the fewest children.

TRUE FALSE

False. College graduates have less children than average, but, among all college graduates, those with the highest income have the largest families. This is one instance where the rule of "more money less children" doesn't hold true.

Three out of four college grads are satisfied with their choice of school in later years.

TRUE FALSE

True. Graduates of all ages polled on this subject expressed overwhelming satisfaction with the schools they selected. More than three out of four graduates say they would attend the same school if they had it to do over again.
