The Texas Aggies today again hung on to top billing in the poll of the nation's sports writers and broadcasters by a decisive margin.

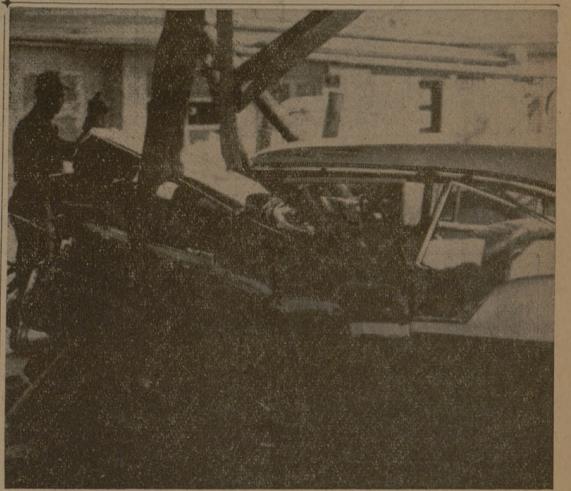

Two other Southwest Conference teams, Texas Christian and Rice grabbed 17th and 20th place respectively.

But some real scraps developed among the leaders as Oklahoma and Auburn finished only eight points apart in the race for second place; Michigan State led Iowa by 112 points for fourth and Ohio State edged out Tennessee by 34 for the sixth spot.

With 184 experts casting ballots this week, the powerful Texas Aggies drew 60 first place votes and a total of 1,577 points on the usual basis of ten for each vote for first, nine for second, etc. Oklahoma clung to second by the margin of 46 firsts and 1,411 points to Auburn's 42 and 1,403.

$2,500,000 Granted For New Apartments

A $2,500,000 federal loan to A&M to finance the construction of housing for 252 married students and their families was approved Friday by the U. S. Community Facilities Administration of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Tentative plans currently call for erection of 21 buildings in the area north of College View that is now being used for the Firemen's Training School. The buildings will be of frame construction and covered with brick veneer. Each building will be divided into apartments containing a living room, dining room, bedroom, kitchenette and bath. There will be central utility rooms and heating units in each building.

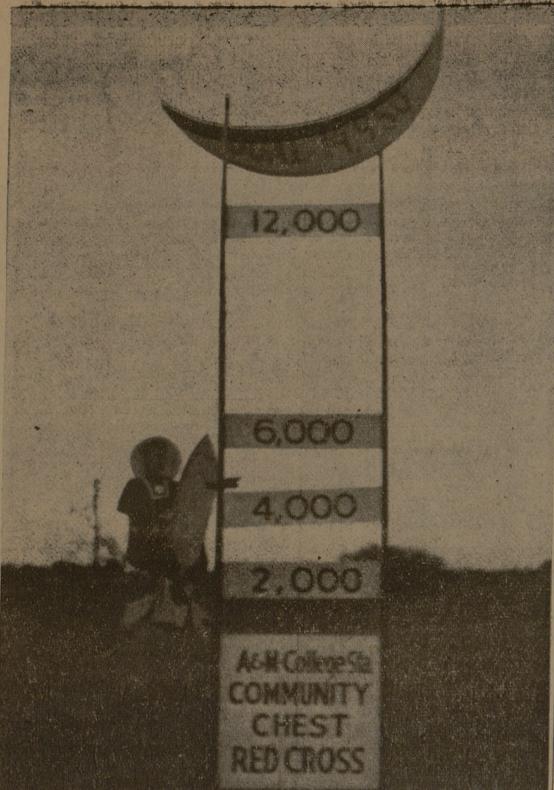

Construction of the apartments will not begin until the board of directors of the A&M System approves the federal government's proposal to buy revenue bonds issued by the A&M System to repay the loan, approval by the government of the architectural plans and certain agreements on essential services for the housing area.

In announcing the loan, CFA said that 22 per cent of the A&M student body is married. While there are 1,600 married students at the college, there are presently only 526 housing units for them on the campus. The other students live in rented quarters in the A&M area.

Chest Rocket Falls Short

As the A&M College-College Station Community Chest drive enters its final day, the rocket to the chest's moon-goal of $14,950 is still below the half-way mark. More funds were expected to come in today however and help boost the space ship further toward its moon.

Community Chest Falls Short of Goal

Today marks the close of the 1957-58 A&M College-College Station Community Chest drive, and according to co-chairman Richard Vrooman, the amount collected will fall short of the $14,950 goal.

Vrooman said last night $6,800 had been turned in to date. Although there was still some money which had not been turned in by collection zone captains, he felt the drive would fall short, but couldn't say by how much.

Vrooman pointed out that although the drive officially closes today, contributions to the chest can be made year round. Anyone wishing to make a contribution may do so by contacting him or any other officer or zone captain of the chest.

"As a whole, citizens contributed their full share, although there were also many who objected to the drive and didn't give their support for various reasons," Vrooman said.

He said most of the objections were due to some of the 15 charities the chest funds support. He also said that many contributions came in naming a specific

Candidates For Fish Officers Begin Filing

Filing for freshman class officers began at 8 this morning in the Office of Student Activities and will continue through 5 p. m. Monday.

To be elected from the class of '61 is a president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, social secretary, four student senate members, and five election committee members. The election will be Nov. 21.

Class officers and election committee members must have a 1.0 grade point ratio at mid-semester grade reports to be eligible according to W. D. (Pete) Hardesty, student activities organization adviser. Student Senate candidates must have a 1.5 G.P.R., said Hardesty.

Position on the ballot will be determined as candidates file, the first to file being first on the ballot.

On voting day, four voting machines will be at the post office entrance in the Memorial Student Center, and three in the old ticket office west of Milner Hall in front of Sbisla Mess Hall.

Hardesty said student identification cards will serve as poll tax receipts.

charity to which they wished the money to go.

All charities supported by the chest are selected on the basis of how much they will benefit local people in need, by a budget committee of College Station citizens.

The chest drive began two weeks ago today.

Most Ags Against Corps Honor Code

Most Corps and Civilian students interviewed yesterday opposed the proposed A&M Honor Code accepted by Corps seniors Thursday.

Code proponents were not surprised at students reaction. Jack Nelson, Corps public information officer, said the reaction showed more orientation on the code is needed.

"Many students have good reasons for opposing the code but I believe it is quite adequate and will be accepted by most students after it is fully understood," Nelson said.

Congressman Olin Teague said that he thought the leaders of the movement for the honor code were trying to move it too fast. He felt the code could be a good thing, but that it was necessarily a slow process.

"The honor code would really help out the school and the Corps if it went into effect," said Charles Lessard, Corps senior. "I think most of the opposition is coming from people who have not read the code."

Corps senior, E. M. Huit, did not approve of the code.

"The whole thing is being forced on people who have to live under it by people whom it will not affect," he said.

"I think an honor code would build the character of the students and build the reputation of the school," said Carroll Bagley, Squadron 14 freshman. "But I would not want to turn in a student whom I saw cheating in class."

Another Corps freshman, Earl Cooper, had this to say. "The honor code is a good thing, but it would be bad for the school if the code was installed and then failed."

Jon Pierce, C Field Artillery sophomore had no complaint about the code.

"I think the honor code as it stands would be okay," he said.

Charles Welch, Civilian senior; Larry Whitman, Corps freshman; Bob Davis, Corps sophomore, and Jay Crawford, Civilian junior, all agreed that the honor code was a good thing, but that it should apply to every student and not be limited to members of the Corps.

"We are all for an honor code," agreed Ed Wyatt, Paul Carroll and Charles Dahl, all Squadron 23 seniors. "But we don't believe that the suggested code would work unless it includes both Civilians and members of the Corps."

"Civilians would have to have restrictions placed on them and elect their members to the honor council along with the Corps," Dahl added.

West Point Officer Studies Student Center

A United States Military Academy officer studied A&M's Memorial Student Center this weekend to aid in planning a cadet activities center at West Point.

Col. John W. Thompson, post engineer, left this morning, after a stay which began Friday and included observation of Fall Military Day and the A&M-SMU game.

Thompson said he found the MSC very functional and was surprised at its extensive use.

"Its physical layout impresses upon me the need in our planning for flexible layout for changing needs," he said.

Col. Thompson said the academy's present facilities are scattered and entirely inadequate.

"Although our cadets don't have as much time for activities as A&M students, the proposed activities center will be of great value on weekends and some times during the week," the colonel said.

Delaplane Award To Be Established

A three man committee has been appointed to aid in establishing a John Paul Delaplane Memorial Fund to provide awards to students in recognition of research contributions in poultry and animal diseases.

The committee, composed of J. C. Miller, R. E. Patterson and R. D. Turk, will aid only the establishment of the fund. The fund itself will be held in trust by the college and administered so that all its income will be used to provide the awards.

Dr. Delaplane, past head of the Department of Veterinary Microbiology, School of Veterinary Medicine, died Sept. 22. He was a nationally recognized figure in research on virus diseases of poultry.

Contributions to the fund should be made out to the John Paul Delaplane Memorial Fund and mailed to the Texas A&M College Development Fund, College Station, Tex.

Research Director CS Lion Speaker

The A&M Research Foundation was created to serve the college as a research promoting and research bringing organization, Archie M. Kahan, executive director of the foundation told the College Station Lions yesterday.

Speaking at the Lions luncheon meeting, Kahan told the Lions of the foundation's organization and operation. He said the research foundation was entirely self-supported and non profit.

Lions praised the Aggies for their work in supporting the hemophilia blood drive they are sponsoring today.

"Aggies certainly are willing to help others besides their Aggie buddies," a Lion spokesman said.

"The Student Senate opened a booth to sign up donors, and after signing up 415 Aggie volunteer donors there were still about 50 students waiting in line," one Lion said.

Today, more than 300 Aggie blood donors were scheduled to give a pint of blood to the drive.
