Cadets Warned of TU Might; Begin Practice for Turkey Day

By JIM CARRELL

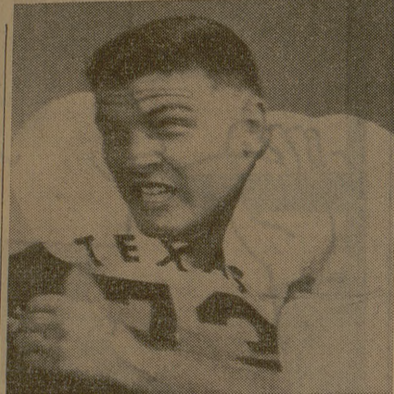

A&M and Texas, both with possible chances at the Cotton Bowl, clash on Thanksgiving Day in College Station, but Rice Institute is almost certain to be in Dallas ahead of both.

To secure the host's role in Dallas on New Year's Day, the Aggies and Longhorns have to win and hope for a Rice tie or loss with its remaining opponents, TCU and Baylor.

Rice's 7-6 win over A&M leaves the Aggies virtually out of national championship and Cotton Bowl contention. Only the most important game of the season remains for the Steers and Farmers.

The favorite's role belongs to the Aggies, but football odds cards for TU-A&M games are generally crumpled and thrown into the gutter, for this big rivalry is one full of upsets and the point spread is seldom correct.

In 1955 the Aggies were 10 point favorites to win. Texas won by 14, 20-6. Last year A&M, with a fine defense, and favored by 18 points, won 34-21.

"This year Texas is a young ball club with six sophomores in the starting lineup," said Aggie assistant coach, J. T. King. "But, they've got the kind of veteran strength packed into their lineup to make them an extremely tough team."

"We'll have to play 50 per cent better than we've played this year to win," cautioned King.

Coach King explained that lately the Longhorns have been making fewer mistakes than they did in earlier games, and their kicking game is excellent, both on kicking and on run backs.

After receiving the warning order that Texas was out to stage the second straight defeat of the season on the Aggies, the Cadets moved onto Kyle Field to begin preparations for the Turkey Day contest.

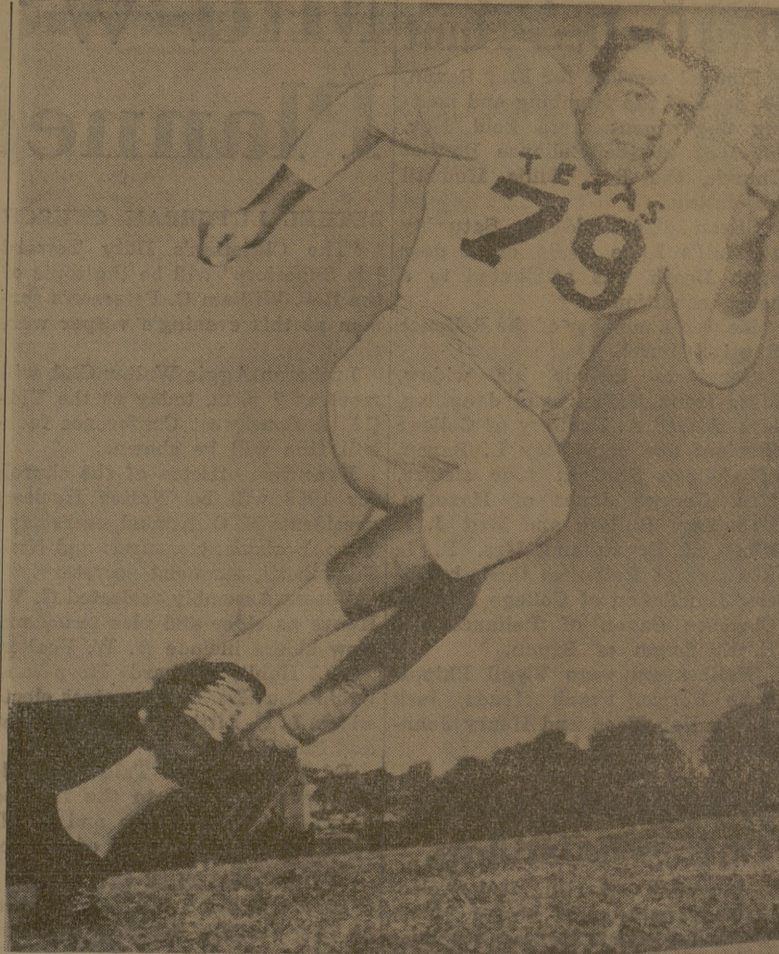

Wind sprints in sweat clothing highlighted the agenda and game plans were formulated as the defending champions worked for an hour and forty-five minutes. Wednesday's schedule will consist mainly of heavy work. "I intend to look for some old-fashioned butting," Coach Paul Bryant said.

A survey of game movies brought about some changes in the Farmer lineup, with eight new faces on the red-shirted team. Raymond Doucet moved into the pivot slot, with Allen Goehring and Jim Stanley advancing to first string guards. A. L. Simmons, senior tackle from San Antonio received the nod at right tackle and Don Smith of Phillips took over right end.

In the backfield, Charlie Milstead assumed man-under chores, along with newcomers Robert Sanders and fullback Gordon LeBoeuf. This left only three regulars in the starting lineup: John Crow, Charley Krueger and Bobby Marks.

Coach J. T. King pointed out Texas has "several sophomores who play like seniors."

Shorthorns, Fish In Shrine Game

AUSTIN, (AP) — The freshmen teams of A&M and the University of Texas may set the pace for their elders in their annual Shrine benefit game here Saturday.

The freshman teams have played 19 times. In 11 of those years, the school that won the Thanksgiving game between the varsity teams. If you're counting on upsets, the Texas Shorthorns and Longhorns are your team. If you're picking the favorites, it's the Fish and Aggies.

A&M freshmen gained the favorite's role with a 14-0 victory last week over the Rice Owlets. Texas' frosh tied the Rice freshmen.
