Building Underway On Hillel Chapel

Construction of a new $125,000 chapel on the corner of Jersey and Dexter Streets is now underway by A&M's B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation.

Ground-breaking ceremonies, at which A&M President M. T. Harrington delivered the principal address, were held Thanksgiving Day.

The building will consist of three main parts: administrative, recreational and chapel areas. The administrative area will have a director's office and secretarial space; the recreational part is to be taken up by a game room, dining room, snack bar, lounge, kitchen facilities, library and music-study rooms.

Besides furnishing permanent seating for 60 people, with provisions to permit expansion into the lounge area on special occasions, the chapel plans call for a permanent Bima, Ark and pulpit in the sanctuary.

Gordon Hill of R. B. Butler Inc. of Bryan, general contractor of the project, said construction of the chapel would take about six months.

The building will be built, ledge-stone, with wood paneling, acoustical ceilings, aluminum windows and terrazo floors.

Electrical work on the project is being done by Harris Electric Co., and mechanical contractor is the Natkin Co. of Houston.

Lenart Gabert, Houston, project architect, and Jack J. Foreman, Houston, general building chairman of the B'nai B'rith Building Corporation, both former Aggies, are working on the project.

A New Chapel Begins
Turning the first spadeful of dirt for the new B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation chapel is two members of the foundation's building committee. In the foreground, A&M President M. T. Harrington, holding the shovel, is joined by Lenart Gabert, project architect, and Jack J. Foreman, general building chairman.
