Senator Hubert H. Humphrey

Minnesota's Junior Senator, Hubert H. Humphrey, is one of several outstanding members of our two houses of Congress who has successfully made the transition from professor to politics. Born in Wallace, South Dakota, May 27, 1911, Humphrey entered the academic world as professor of political science at Macalester College in St. Paul. After two terms as mayor of Minneapolis, he began his senatorial career following his election in 1948. Recently Humphrey has exerted considerable and distinguished efforts in the field of foreign relations. He is chairman of the Senate Special Committee on Disarmament and is currently a United States delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. In April and May, 1957, Senator Humphrey made an official tour of the Middle East in his capacity as a key member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Mr. John Scott

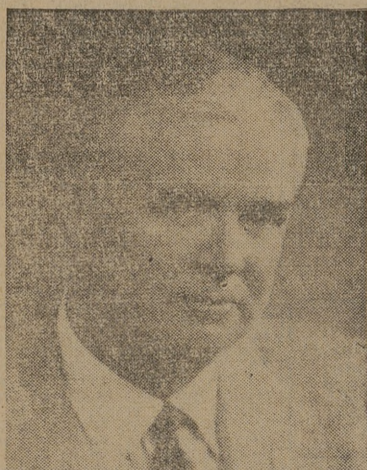

John Scott of TIME is an author and a correspondent with unusual firsthand experience in global reporting. As a Special Assistant to the Publisher of TIME, Scott brings to the lecture stand a unique point of view on the Role of the United States in World Affairs. Scott's global assignments for TIME began in the summer of 1952, where he spent most of his time getting a close look at the reconstruction of Germany and Austria. For the past five years, he has made extended trips to Europe and the Middle East, with a three-month survey of Latin America in 1955 and a swing through Southeast Asia in 1957. TIME'S Publisher likes to describe Scott as his "Intellectual Johnny Appleseed."

Dr. Charles L. Dunham, one of the world's leading authorities on the medical aspects of atomic energy, is now on duty as Director of the Division of Biology and Medicine of the Atomic Energy Commission. An Illinois native and a graduate of Rush Medical College, Dr. Dunham saw wartime service as Chief of Preventive Medicine for U. S. Army Forces in the Middle Pacific.

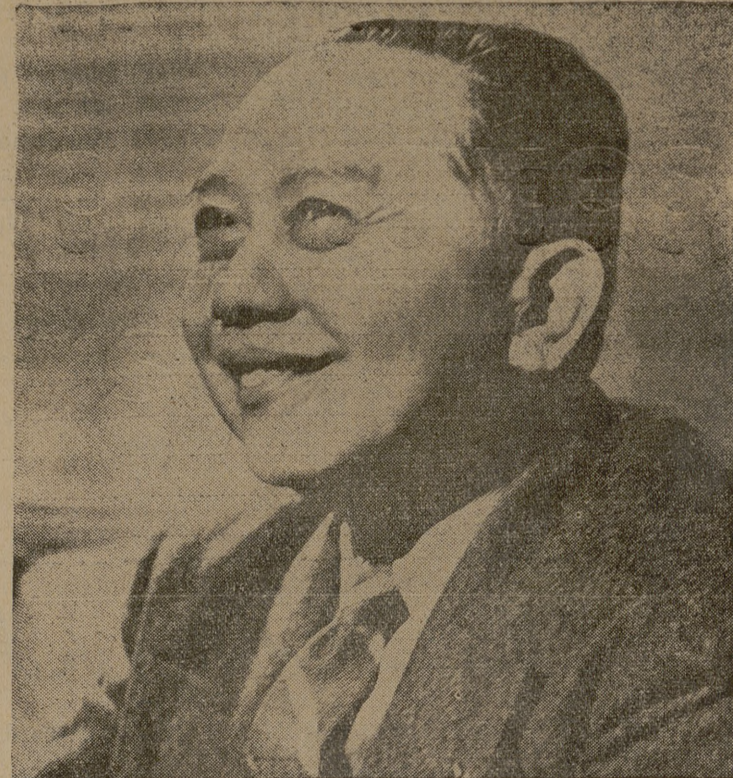

EUGENE M. ZUCKERT

Mr. Eugene M. Zuckert, formerly a member of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, currently combines the practice of law with the profession of an atomic energy consultant. A graduate of Yale University, he served as Assistant Secretary of the Air Force before his association with the Atomic Energy Commission.

JOSEPH E. JOHNSON

Mr. Joseph E. Johnson is by training and education a professor of History, but the demand for his services by the United States Government and by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace has been too constant to permit him to practice his profession. He has been president of the Carnegie group since 1950, and from 1944-1947 served as Chief of the Division of International Security Affairs in the Department of State.

General Carlos P. Romulo

Renowned throughout the World for his statesmanlike contributions toward international cooperation and World Peace, General Romulo has also served his native Philippines in war and peace. With General MacArthur on Bataan and Corregidor, Romulo also served with him in Australia and in the liberation of the Philippine Islands. Later he was appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Philippine Ambassador to the United States, and, currently, Philippine representative on the U. N. Security Council and Chairman of their delegation to the U. N. General Assembly. In 1949-50 he attracted the attention of the entire world by his capable handling of his duties as President of the U. N. Fourth General Assembly.
