Learning: A Duty

Judge James P. Hart last night stressed the importance of the educated mind to the future of our country. His remarks apply not only to the technical and scientific field but every facet of our educational system today. No more can any field or those studying it afford to maintain an educational status-quo or waste many moments in striving for the betterment of our nation and ultimately mankind in general. In the interests of the nation's future, each Aggie should spend every available moment preparing himself to serve mankind in his chosen field and becoming a better citizen. As Judge Hart said, too much emphasis is placed on leisure and acquiring material gains and not enough on serving our fellowman as brothers under God should.

Letters To The Editor

Editor:
The Battalion
The South once stood behind the wall of tradition, and that wall fell on her. Don't let that happen to this great institution. Continue the good work in "Letters to the Editor" and I am sure that the lost cause will fall on its own.

because he is a conservative politically? Or is it because he didn't instantly take a violently fanatical stand on the issue?
Woodrow Wilson's comment might be appropriate to the Battalion: "A little group of willful men representing no opinion but their own."
Sincerely yours,

The Battalion:
When we read the Battalion today, we had the best laugh yet. This coeducation jag which the editor and his ultra-liberal family are on may be abortive, but it is turning this college newspaper into the laughing stock of the community. Your slanted news stories, "fishy" looking student polls and renegade political policies have made the Battalion an oracle of radicalism. One front page cartoon depicts Governor Daniel as a weakling who has to be goaded into action. Why? After all, Mr. Howard's request that Governor Daniel do something came just a few hours before the sub-committee was dissolved. Are you antagonistic toward the governor

"But captain, sir—do you want me to take down a picture of my mother?"

Seems like the water, water everywhere bit in the new Corps area Tuesday was a success—or a disaster, depending on one's vantage point. Those who watched from the safety of the steam tunnel got nothing; those that participated got wet. And an inspection. Yes, it seems the college still disapproves of late-at-night water follies for the troops.

Is It True That: Jon Hagler can take off but can't land? Teddy Lowe eats out? Paul Costen has a new nickname? John Ligon will get a commission in the Naval Reserve? Arvill Newby is pledging Kappa Kappa (KK)?

"Oh, you never miss the water 'till the well runs dry . . . dum-dum."

Anyone who proposes to do good must not expect people to roll stones out of his way, but must accept his lot calmly if they even roll a few more upon it.
