Cadets Play Well In Spoiler Role; Jumble Conference For Third Time

By GARY ROLLINS
 Battalion Sports Editor

After further scrambling the conference standings by thumping Texas Tech Tuesday night, 79-63, the dark-horse Aggies have suddenly loomed as the all-deciding factor in the comedy-of-errors that is called the race for the SWC championship.

Southern Methodist will have to beat the Texas Aggies this Saturday night if they are to win their fourth consecutive Southwest Conference crown. Coach Bob Rogers' unpredictable cagers have menaced the hardwoods on many occasions this season, and brought grimaces of pain and disappointment from other schools as they were rudely dethroned from the top slot.

As the conference stands now—on shaky ground—the Cadets inhabit a berth at third place along with TCU.

However, the powers-that-be, or the Ponies, Hogs and Raiders have all felt the sting of the Farmers and carry scars to prove it.

If Southern Methodist had beaten the Cadets in White Coliseum last Jan. 17, they would have been well on their way to their fourth straight championship, possibly have cinched it. As it stands, the Ponies must beat down the arrogant Farmers this Saturday night, or they will fall back into the rat-race with Rice, Arkansas and Texas Tech.

Arkansas was thoroughly hamstrung in College Station last Saturday night by the hit-and-run Aggies, and found themselves suddenly entrenched in second place after a long stay in the top spot.

Against Texas Tech, the Aggies created Black Tuesday on the campus in Lubbock by stripping the cocky Raiders of their honor—and their seat on top of the heap.

The indications are that the conference dash for the roses is far from over. Southern Methodist must still play both A&M in Dallas and Baylor at Waco.

Rice must contest Texas on the Longhorn's home court and Texas Tech in Lubbock.

Arkansas hosts Baylor on their home floor, which is apparently the least difficult schedule of all—since the Porkers hold an advantage "in the hills." Thanks to the Aggies, basketball in the Southwest Conference has been interesting this year.

Intramurals

"A" Infantry kept up the winning way of the Infantry teams yesterday by defeating "B" Armor in class B volleyball by a score of 2-0.

Members of the winning team were William Olvetton, Tommy Nelson, Gary Bateman, Billy Gressett, Harold Brown, and James Haygood.

But "B" Infantry didn't fare so well—they lost to Squadron 16 by the same score, 2-0.

Gerald Kallina, Tom Wilson, David Wilson, Jerry Johnson, Jim Humphries, and Charles Olbrich made up the Squadron 16 team.

Maroon Band also shutout "A" Transportation Corps, 2-0.

Members of the winning team were Don Copley, Tommy Terrell, Herman Henkamer, Frank Steinfeld, Fred Buckner, and Weldon Hoff.

"C" Infantry forfeited to Squadron 15 in the other scheduled game.

Wrestling activity also continued yesterday.

The match between Buster Brown and Gerald Griffin is a good example of the fine matches that have been fought since competition began.

Brown is on the wrestling team, but Griffin seemed determined to overcome his experience. It was a vigorously fought match, and at the end of the third two-minute period, the score was tied at seven points each. But Brown got two points in the final round to take a close decision, 9-7.

Louie Lidz, Squadron 17, pinned Gwinn Thompson of "A" Composite in the second round. Lidz is on the wrestling team, and his experience and conditioning were too much for Thompson.

Some of the matches didn't last very long.

For instance, Regal of "B" Engineers pinned Lewis Reddell, Squadron 13, early in the first round. Reddell was thrown to the mat in the early seconds and never seemed to recover.

Thompson, Squadron 5, and Frazier, "B" AAA, also won early in the first round over Singleton, Squadron 13, and Maxwell, Squadron 8, respectively.
