

The Kitchen Korner

BY ZULIN C. DE PINERO

With the coming of the Lenten season, many of us are racking our brains for something new in the way of Lenten menus. The magazines are full of recipes which use cheese and macaroni and tuna and salmon in a thousand different ways, but 40 days is a long time and meals do tend to get monotonous after a while.

In case you are looking for something to serve your family during this season, Codfish Vizcaina may be the dish. The recipe is as old as Spain and is also used extensively throughout Latin American countries.

For it I recommend the use of dried codfish which, although a trifle more expensive than the frozen variety, is of a higher quality and better flavor. It is sold in 1-pound boxes at some of our supermarkets and this amount will yield 4 servings.

The day it is going to be prepared it should be washed in cool water and left soaking for 4 hours, changing the water about 3 times. This is done to remove the excess salt with which it is packed.

Drain the codfish and prepare as follows:

In a large pan alternate layers of small pieces of codfish and 3 quartered potatoes with slices from 2 medium onions. Then mix 1/2 cup tomato sauce, 1/2 cup olive oil, 1/2 cup olives, 1 teaspoon capers, 1/2 cup dark seedless raisins, 2 cloves garlic, 1 bay leaf, and 10 blanched almonds. Pour this over the ingredients in the pan and set the pan over low fire for 30 minutes.

Serve over white rice and accompanied by a crisp green salad.

Two hundred and seven reservists of the 343rd Field Artillery Battalion, U. S. Army Reserve commanded by Lt. Col. Ogbourne D. Butler, will conduct small arms qualification firing at Fort Hood, on March 8-9, the second consecutive year this training has been held.

Headquarters Battery, commanded by Capt. Tom W. Ross is made up of men from the Bryan-College Station area.

During the two day period the men will fire the M-1 rifle, .30 caliber carbine, and .45 caliber pistol. The individual qualification firing is part of the overall Army Reserve program which stresses combat readiness.

The 343rd has been located in this area for the past ten years and is a unit of the 90th Infantry Division commanded by Maj. Gen. Earl J. Rudder, vice president of A&M.
