Oceanography Jobs Open To Students

Summer job opportunities are awaiting students in physical science and engineering, Bill Cunningham, Department of Oceanography and Meteorology, announced recently.

Six summer fellowships are being offered by the Scripps Institution of Oceanography of La Jolla, Calif., open to men with two or more years of college training, preferably in science and engineering. Applicants selected will take an oceanographic expedition off the Central American coast, he said.

The stipend for the full time is $200, and there will be no expenses while at sea. Work during the expedition will almost exclusively be physical oceanography, with the main object being to measure the surface and subsurface currents in that region.

From June 23 through July 18, a special course in meteorology will be given to a selected group of 30 mathematics or physical science students at the University of Chicago.

3 Ag Scholarships To Be Given in '59

A series of three scholarship and fellowship grants will be awarded by the Ralston Purina Company to qualified School of Agriculture students in 1958-59, R. E. Leighton, chairman of Agricultural Scholarships Committee, said this week.

The grants include a $500 scholarship, a summer fellowship and a scholarship to the American Youth Foundation Leadership Training Camp.

Applicants for the summer fellowship should pick up application blanks at the Agricultural Dean's office.

Sponsored by the National Science Foundation, the workshop in meteorology requires no prior training in meteorology. Transportation to and from Chicago, room, board, tuition and book allowance will be paid, Cunningham said.

The Marine Fisheries Division of the Texas Game and Fish Commission has also announced summer openings for senior and graduate students in biology or a closely associated field.

Students will serve as field assistants to marine biologists in various bay areas along the Texas coast. A salary of $250 per month plus travel expenses will be paid.

For further information or applications, students should contact Bill Cunningham, Room 113, Goodwin Hall.

Lions Club Sees Hurricane Film

College Station Lions saw a film Monday on the destruction wrought on the Louisiana coast by Hurricane Audrey, 1957's worst hurricane.

The film was furnished by the General Adjustment Bureau thru local insurance agents. In turn, local insurance men were guests at the Lions' luncheon in the Memorial Student Center.
