a prize," said New York-born Buttons. "This should serve as an inspiration to every guy who has been written off in this business."

With the two supporting awards, "Sayonara" started out the evening with a fast pace, chalking up four quick Oscars. But "The Bridge on the River Kwai" came up fast and scored as the winner with seven awards.

Other awards included:

Best documentary feature—"Albert Schweitzer."

Best live action short—"The Wetback Hound."

Best cartoon short—"Birds Anonymous."

Best sound recording—"Sayonara."

Best special effects—"The Enemy Below," Walter Rossi.

Best art direction—"Sayonara," Ed Hawroth. Set direction—Robert Priestly.

Best film editing—"The Bridge on the River Kwai."

Best music scoring—"The Bridge on the River Kwai," Malcomb Arnold.

Best achievement in cinematography—"The Bridge on the River Kwai," Jack Hildyard.

Best foreign language picture—"The Nights of Cabiria," Dino de Laurentiis production, Italy.

David Lean, the British director, won the award for best director for "The Bridge on the River Kwai."

Best screenplay based on material from another medium—"The Bridge on the River Kwai," Pierre Boulle.

Best story and screenplay written directly for the screen—"Designing Woman," George Wells.

Best costume design—"Les Girls," Orry-Kelly.

It was a balmy evening for Hollywood's biggest night and the stars were out in their tails and ermine. Sharp cheers went up from the throngs lining Hollywood Boulevard and the tension mounted for the Oscar sweepstakes.

Clark Gable, nervous about his live television debut, was one of the first arrivals. He was followed by another previous winner, Ernest Borgnine, and two-time winner Anthony Quinn.

Red Buttons was among the first contenders to arrive, and the cheers indicated he was a popular candidate.

Also cheered was another hopeful for supporting actor honors, Russ Tamblyn, who expects to get drafted two days hence.

Hugh O'Brien came not in his Wyatt Earp costume, but in tails. He was to present an honorary award for the screen's first cowpoke, Broncho Billy Anderson, who entered the Pantages Theater unrecognized by the crowd.

A note of humor was injected when starlet Gloria Rhoads arrived escorted with a midget dressed in an ape costume. Police escorted her simian friend quietly but quickly away. Gloria, dressed in a low-cut gown, was allowed to stay.

The show went off in rapid-fire order, thanks to fast pacing by a seemingly endless parade of stars. The television show had its dull stretches, as all these affairs do. But it also had some highlights.

Notable among them:

A curious duet of "Baby It's Cold Outside" by current idol Rock Hudson and old-time flame Mae West; a rousing song and dance number by two "Oscars losers," Kirk Douglas and Burt Lancaster. As always, Bob Hope kept things crackling with such gags as: "I'm as nervous as a Russian scientist's dog."

Here's part the second of a series (of sorts) on things to expect at dances on the campus:

At other colleges, dances start at 8 and last 'till. Here, intermissions start at 8 and last 'till.

***

Invariably some senior shows with a girl so Corps happy she's wearing combat boots with her formal.

You'll recognize this fellow on the campus: all his friends say, "Your girl wears combat boots."

***

With girls and the rumors of girls in the air, maybe some 4th classman will bring a girl with the Yul Brynner look.

***

Just think: if everyone started it, girls would easily be identified with the classification of their date.

Of course, sophomores and juniors probably would have some difficulty getting dates.

New Crude Oil Import Curb Hinted

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House indicated Wednesday that new curbs on crude oil imports will be announced Thursday.

Press secretary James C. Hagerty told newsmen he had nothing to announce on the subject immediately. But he suggested that those interested show up at the White House Thursday morning.

Hagerty said he could give no details "until I get the executive order" to be signed by President Eisenhower.

Secretary of Commerce Weeks told a house committee Tuesday that further voluntary restrictions on imports of foreign oil had been agreed on within the administration.
