

The City Beat

By Johnny Johnson

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of weekly columns that will appear each Thursday on happenings in the A&M Consolidated Schools, City of College Station and other civic activities.)

The College Station Civic Association's President Don Dale has announced the annual "Clean-Up" Drive for the city Oct. 6-8.

During the period, a special effort will be directed toward cleaning up of litter from streets, highways, residential areas and the business districts.

Special trash collections have been set for the south side of town on Monday, Oct. 6; in the area east of Highway 6 on Tuesday, Oct. 7; and in the north part of town on Wednesday, Oct. 8.

Barney Welch's suggestions for civic support of a new National Guard armory at the recent City Council meeting brought out many possible public uses of the building.

Welch pointed out that the building, if and when College Station gets it, could be used for civic functions, such as variety shows, dances, school parties and group meetings.

If a plan is followed here as in other cities across the state, the new armory would certainly be an asset to the community. In other cities and towns the building is available for public use for only a nominal service charge, far below the value of its use.

Several sites are under consideration for the armory.

First step in obtaining the building is for the city or an individual to deed the land to the Texas Armory Board.
