Cadets Aiming for Upset In Seventh Cougar Clash

Ags' Spirit High After Hard Week

By BOB WEEKLEY

After three days of steady head knocking, the Aggies have emerged as a new team—one with spirit and a semblance of polish primed for a Saturday night upset in Rice Stadium against the University of Houston Cougars.

The Cadets and Cougars meet for the seventh time, with the Farmers holding a 3-2-1 edge, in a feature attraction that is expected to draw some 60,000 eager spectators.

Houston is a worthy opponent for any SWC team, blessed with fine speed and size in the backfield and a sturdy line that outweighs the Ags by 15 to 20 pounds per man. The Cats' motto is said to be "have line, will travel."

Big guns for the Houston attack are placed around the two halfbacks, Claude King and Harold Lewis. Both athletes have been clocked in the 100-yard dash and weigh-in around the 190-pound bracket.

Charley Milstead, Ag tailback, will again unlimber his passing arm to provide the big threat for the Cadets. The blond bomber completed 8 out of 18 last week against Tech for 94 yards.

The Tyler junior's quick kicking ability is also expected to keep the Cats on their toes. Milstead averaged 49.2 yards per kick to almost wreck the Raiders' offense.

A&M's injuries are expected to be down to the minimum for the contest with fullback Dick Gay, Milstead and end John Tracey ready to do battle.

The A&M-Houston games have traditionally been close, with three of six games decided in the final minute of play. This season will be unusual with the Aggies being placed in the role of underdog.

It all began in 1952 when the Ags stopped UH at the six-inch line in the last minute of the first half to win 21-13. The next drama was in 1954. In the fading seconds of the game the Cadets had drive down to the UH 3-yard line. They were behind 10-7.

A play carried the Farmers to the 1-yard line when an excited Ag picked up the ball after the play and threw it to an official. The throw was wild and the ball rolled into the end zone while the clock ticked off the final seconds of play.

No-one will forget the '56 thriller when in the last minute of the game, score tied 14-14, Quarterback Roddy Osborne took the snapback on the one-yard line and was thrown for a loss. The gun sounded after the play, the score still tied.

Squadron 19 Gets Airplane

Some members of Squadron 19, the Civil Air Patrol outfit, group around the airplane the group bought in Big Spring last weekend with money collected from members of the unit. The craft, a 1941 Interstate two-place tandem trainer, cost the unit $575.

Squadron 19 Purchases Small Training Aircraft

Squadron 19, A&M's Civil Air Patrol Unit, has its wings now, and not the kind that can be worn on a uniform.

The CAP outfit has purchased an airplane and is presently setting up a flight training program which should keep the ship off the ground more than it is on.

The light plane is a 1941 model Interstate two-place tandem trainer. Cadet 1st Lt. Bob Hamilton purchased it last weekend in Big Spring with cash-on-the-barrel made up of money provided by the members of the outfit. Hamilton went to Big Spring last Saturday night, looked at the ship Sunday morning and flew the craft to Coulter Field, near Bryan, Sunday afternoon. The Interstate trainer is blue trimmed in yellow. Powered by a 65-horsepower Continental engine, the craft's cruising speed is about 85 miles per hour. The ship is generally considered by aviation people to be an excellent student training ship, and at the same time has a sufficiently fast cruising speed to make it practical for cross-country flying.

Of the 47 Air Force ROTC men who belong to the unit, 20 are pilots and all are CAP members. The pilots hold ratings ranging from flight instructor, commercial pilot and private pilot to student pilot.

The CAP Cadets paid for the ship out of their own pockets. Each man kicked in $15 toward the cost of the aircraft. It cost $575. The plane is presently being based at Coulter Field.

The squadron, commanded by Cadet Capt. Ward Boyce, is busy laying plans for a training program which will give the members as much flight training as possible during the school year. However, this CAP ship will have a two-fold function.

As a Civil Air Patrol Squadron, the organization is a part of CAP's nationwide network of search-and-rescue bases. Anytime that an aircraft should be reported missing in this area the Squadron 19 plane will join other CAP aircraft in the ensuing search.

Squadron 19 is also planning to set up a radio station which will keep them in constant contact with other CAP units over the state. This radio contact will enable them to swing into action immediately should an emergency arise.

Grady Barr, '58, who is Commanding Officer of the 2nd Battalion, 2nd Regiment, practice teaches at Jones Junior High on weekday afternoons, and spends his after-school hours putting the school's 30-man team through its paces.

Band to Perform Before Game Starts

The Texas Aggie Band will perform after the pregame warmups at the University of Houston game rather than at the half time Saturday in Houston. Due to a high school band getting together at the half time period, time would not permit the Aggie Band to perform at that time.

The Band will move onto the field at the south end. To get things rolling, the band will do a ripple countermarch every five yards all the way down the field. Coming back down the field they will execute a double-delay counter march from the center beginning on the 40-yard line and picking up on the 25, according to Rudy Schubert, head drum major.

Next the band will perform a single delay counter march from the right side and a northwestern turn to the right. After the counter march the band will halt in the center of the field and go into the marching "T" on the west side. It will counter-march again crosswise on the field and halt, facing the Aggie stands.

Lt. Col. E. V. Adams will direct the band as it plays the "The Spirit of Aggieland," concluding the performance.

Civilian Council Meets

Civilian Student Council President Tommy Beckett holds forth at the group's first meeting of the year. Among the topics discussed were the proposed civilian honor code and seating at the football games.

First Meeting

Civilian Council Talk Honor Code

By DAVE STOKER

The Civilian Student Council held its first meeting of the new school year last night in the Senate Chamber of the Memorial Student Center and discussed, among other business, the adoption of a civilian honor code.

Brought before the members of the council last spring, the honor code was at that time introduced to the civilian dormitory councils, and the majority of the civilian students seemed interested in having an honor code similar to the one the Corps will attempt to pass sometime in October.

President Tommy Beckett opened the discussion of the code, and asked the various members what action should be taken on the situation.

Dick Steadman, senior civilian councilman, said, "I believe we should do something soon because the Corps will be trying to pass their code in October, and they will want to know where we stand on the situation."

Following serious discussion on the subject, the members agreed upon submitting their present code to the civilian dormitory councils as the council's proposal for a civilian honor code. The various dormitories are to then vote on adoption of the code.

By their next meeting, the council hopes to have the honor code situation completed.

Another vital topic brought up by the council and one that was discussed a lot last year, was the civilian seating plan. The plan, that of being seated separately from the Corps, was never completed last year.

The seating plan was almost effective last year, but in some cases didn't work.

Discussing the plan, the members of the council decided better ushering at the games may be the real answer, rather than adopting an entirely new seating plan.

A committee was then appointed by Beckett to study the seating situation. The committeemen are Alton Smith, Jack Little and Dick Steadman.

UofH Ticket Sales Pass Tech Game; 200 More Dates

At the close of the ticket booths Wednesday records showed that more Aggies and their dates plan to go to the University of Houston game than went to the Texas Tech game in Dallas, Pat Dial, business manager of athletics, said late Thursday.

About 500 more student tickets and 200 additional date tickets were purchased for the game in Houston Saturday night.

Dial reported that 2,087 student tickets have been purchased at the ticket booths. Over 50 per cent of those Aggies will have dates, according to the date ticket sales figures. Some 1,277 date tickets were sold, he added.

Reserve seat tickets were on sale until 5 p.m. Thursday. However, the exact number of tickets sold was not known, Dial said.

The annual game between A&M and the U of H is expected to net between 48,000 and 55,000 fans in Rice Stadium, Dial concluded.
