Air Force Captain Versatile

ROTC Instructor Doubles As 'Fish' Football Coach

By BOB EDGE
Battalion Staff Writer

Possibly one of the most interesting and versatile men on the A&M campus today is Capt. Joseph D. Bennett, who is currently holding down the dual responsibilities of assistant professor in the Department of Air Science and assistant freshman football coach.

In his coaching job, Capt. Bennett has special charge of freshman footballers in the Corps who are not presently on athletic scholarships. These boys have been recommended by their high school coaches and are currently trying out for scholarships while living with their respective ROTC organizations.

According to the Air Force coach there are several boys out of the 13 now trying out "who should turn out to be fine football players for A&M." He remarked that the whole group was showing a lot of spirit and the coaching staff was well pleased with them.

In addition to coaching freshmen, the captain counsels them in matters concerning football or air science.

Capt. Bennett is an Aggie-ex himself, graduating with the class of 1950. While at A&M as a physical education major, he distinguished himself as a center on the 1946-47 Aggie football team, was school middleweight boxing champion in 1947-48 and an intramural golf champion. In addition, he taught boxing and helped develop the school golf course.

Prior to attending A&M, he attended the University of Colorado where he was a quarterback on their 1943-44 football team. He has continued his athletic pursuits while in the Air Force, capturing the runner-up position in the Air Force golf tournament while stationed in North Africa. In addition he was consolation champion in a recent tournament in Bryan.

Before his present assignment, Capt. Bennett was stationed at Homestead, Fla., where he was a member of the Strategic Air Command. During the latter part of his seven-year career in SAC, he was adjutant headquarters squadron commander and commandant of the NCO Prep School.

The coach in blue is 33 years old and was born in Joplin, Mo.

His family moved to Texas shortly after he was born and he later distinguished himself as an All-District center on the Abilene High School football team.

He met his wife, Mary, while stationed in Salinas, Kan. They have two children, Jodie, three, and four-year-old Steve, who, according to his dad, is a future Aggie.
