

Southwest Conference Cagers Post Five Intersectional Wins

(AP) — Southwest Conference basketball teams started out poorly last week but finished with a rush that saw them put five intersectional triumphs in the bag and give visions of national prominence.

Big Ten teams found the going rough in an invasion of the Southwest with Southern Methodist knocking over Iowa 65-55 and Rice blistering Wisconsin 78-37.

Texas Christian, Texas Tech and Texas A&M survived the first week of the season without mishap and are tied for the lead with 2-0 records.

Texas Christian posted an important triumph in beating Oklahoma City University, the team that trimmed Southern Methodist 74-51. The Christians got the Chiefs at home and whipped them 66-58.

Arkansas also posted its first intersectional triumph with a 61-52 decision over Oklahoma after having dropped to Missouri 74-71 in an overtime game.

Texas Tech was impressive with a 73-64 victory over Oklahoma after first whipping West Texas State 93-67.

Baylor, which hadn't been expected to start off well anyway, hurt the league worse than anybody else. The Golden Bears took a 65-56 trimming from Georgia Tech and a 71-60 strapping from Auburn.

For the week the league broke even in intersection warfare with five victories against five losses and it was much better than was indicated as late as Friday when the league was 1-4 against outside competition.

Texas A&M beat Trinity 61-51 and Houston 57-45. Trinity it was that knocked over green Texas 83-74.

Rice, which had started out with a 65-49 loss to Kansas, did an about face with a flouish in lashing Wisconsin. Tom Robitaille was the big man as the tall Rice center flipped in 34 points.

Rice held Wisconsin to three field goals the last half.

Southern Methodist grabbed the lead in the first two minutes and never gave Iowa much of a chance to catch up.

Texas Christian's tall Frogs dominated the boards, grabbing 47 rebounds, and that was too much for Oklahoma City University to overcome. Derrill Nippert scored 18 points while Ronnie Stevenson, who usually leads the TCU tallying, did more work at rebounding. He grabbed 11.

Mashall Disputes Pension Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, Monday disputed a player's prediction that the National Football League will adopt a pension plan within the next year.

"Who's going to pay for it?" Marshall asked.

The Redskins owner snapped "no" when asked whether he agreed with Billy Howton, Green Bay end and head of the NFL Players Assn., that the time is ripe for a pro football pension program.

Baylor wants a coach—or rather it wants to get rid of the one there now. Really it's kind of confusing. One day they want him and the next day they don't.

And Sam Boyd, caught in the middle as a result of Athletic Director George Sauer's resignation, says he's going to stay, former students association or no.

Personally I'd like to see Boyd stick around the Southwest Conference since he annually fields a team that is one of the easiest to defeat in this part of the nation.

The defiant Boyd has been head coach at Baylor for three years. His 1956 Baylor team pulled the surprise of the season when it rose up to dump the Tennessee Volunteers in the Sugar Bowl.

In 1957 Baylor was favored to win the conference going away, but something happened to the blueprint and the Bears ended up in the cellar. Repeat performance this season—the Bears winning a total of six games over the two-year period.

The students themselves and the football team he coached are surprisingly quiet about the whole affair. Silence is golden but this one seems a little tinny. Perhaps the students are afraid to speak.

Things don't look too rosy for the Baylorites even if they do get a new coach. They lose the nation's top passer, Buddy Humphrey, to graduation, along with the heart of the team, Fullback Larry Hickman. If they win one game next season in the SWC it will surprise everyone.

But Boyd does have one or two points in his favor. If SMU can retain Bill Meeks, why can't Baylor have Boyd? I guess things are rough all over.

Fish Cagers Win Opener From U of H Kittens, 70-45

By BILL HICKLIN

The promising and talented Texas Aggie freshmen slammed the hapless University of Houston Kittens 70-45 Saturday night in G. Rollie White Coliseum.

Riding the 24-point effort of Carroll Broussard, high school All-American from Port Arthur last year, the young Cadets had little trouble with the diminutive Kittens as they raced to an 8-1 lead during the first four-and-a-half minutes.

A tip-in and a lay-up by Don Riggan opened the scoring before the Kittens managed a free throw. Broussard followed with a pair of nifty jump shots, giving the Fish an 8-1 lead, and the rout was on.

From that point on, it was virtually no contest as the Fish increased their margin to 39-24 at intermission.

Plenty of help was given the 6-5 Broussard by White, who scored 12 points, and the 6-10 Riggan, who chipped in 10 more, all in the first half.

Much of the story can be told by the fact that the Fish hit a blistering 43.5 per cent of their shots from the floor, while the Kittens hit but 25.4 per cent of theirs.

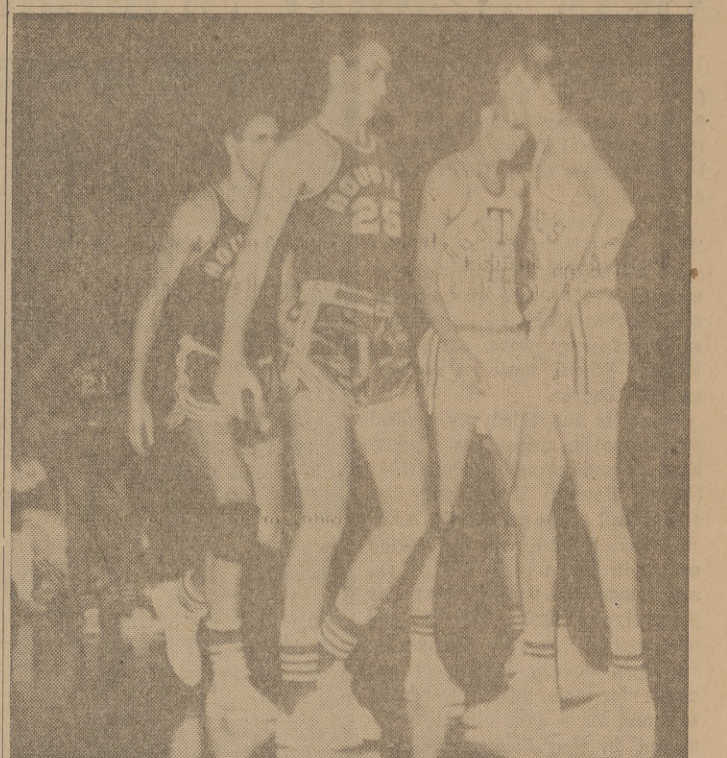

Dick Thurman, a 6-3 forward, led the Kittens with 10 points.

Aggie — Cougar Confusion

This action during the Aggie-Cougar clash last Saturday was as confusing as the look on the face of Richard Molchany (24) of Houston. Molchany and teammate Ted Luckenbill (35) were jockeying for a rebound position with Aggie Wayne Lawrence (12) and Archie Carroll (54) shortly before Neil Swisher dunked a pair of free throws.
