Process Industries Hold Annual Meet; 320 Gather Here

More than 320 representatives of industry from 18 states and Mexico gathered here yesterday morning for the opening session of the three-day, 14th annual Symposium on Instrumentation for the Process Industries.

They were welcomed to the campus by Earl Rudder, vice-president of the college. He said "exchange of ideas at meetings of this kind can't help but move industry forward."

The symposium, conducted by the Department of Chemical Engineering, is one of a series of annual technical meetings designed to lead to an improved understanding of the principles and practice of instrumentation as applied to industries.

Several instrument manufacturers from throughout the country have equipment exhibits of an educational nature in rooms adjoining those where the technical sessions are being held.

In his address, Rudder said, "It is a privilege to welcome you to this conference—you have brought with you much information that will be of value to the faculty of this college."

"By hearing about some of the problems encountered in your work we can fit our educational program to better serve the people," Rudder said.

The vice-president declared that "only through a critical appraisal of our program can we go forward, so we want you to inquire about the services we are rendering and be critical if we are not meeting the challenge of today."

G. F. Brockett of the Fisher Governor Co., Marshalltown, Iowa, presided at the opening technical session.

Dr. I. M. Stein, president, Leeds and Northrup Co., Philadelphia, Pa., addressed the group on the subject "Outlook for Computer Control".

Dr. J. O. Houghen, Research and Engineering Division, Monsanto Chemical Company, St. Louis, Mo., spoke on "Ten Years of Systems Engineering in the Chemical Industry".

Dr. J. D. Lindsay, head of the Chemical Engineering Department, will be the master of ceremonies at a banquet to be held this evening. The speaker will be Chester Lauck, president of Continental Oil Co., Houston. Lauck is "Lum" of Lum and Abner.

Features Music, Exhibits, Tragedy

The first A&M Fine Arts Festival—a weekful of fine arts entertainment featuring popular and classical music presentations, an art exhibit and lecture and the staging of a Greek tragedy—has been set for Feb. 1-8.

AMFAF is a product of the united efforts of members of the Memorial Student Center Recital Series and Creative Arts committees, Town Hall and the Aggie Players.

Schedule for the week will include the Recital Series presentation of Leslie Chabay, tenor, at 3 p. m. Sunday, Feb. 1, in the MSC Ballroom; Town Hall's Boston Pops orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, at 8 p. m. Monday in G. Rollie White Coliseum; and a recital reading of the Greek play "Antigone" Tuesday and Saturday at 8 p. m. and Sunday, February 7 at 3 p. m. in the Ballroom.

Also a Creative Arts lecture by Amy Freeman Lee, artist and lecturer, Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Ballroom; Recital Series presentations of Philippe Entremont, pianist, on Thursday and the Hollywood String Quartet on Friday—each at 8 p. m. in the Ballroom.

Student chairmen coordinating the events are Truman (T) Hearn, Town Hall; Jim Best, The Aggie Players; David Atteberry, Creative Arts; and Gordon Reynolds, Recital Series.

Staff and community members of the AMFAF planning committee are C. G. (Spike) White, Vic Wiering, Louis Hauer, Frank Whitmore, Frank Coulter, Mrs. H. A. Luther, Mrs. Emalita Terry, Mrs. Peter Dehlinger, J. Wayne Stark and C. K. Esten.

AMFAF's opener, Hungarian-born Leslie Chabay, first became known to the American public as a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Resigning from the "Met" in 1951 in order to appear more often as a recitalist and soloist, he has sung with companies and symphonies in most of the major cities in the United States and Europe. He may be heard on recordings by RCA Victor, Bartok, Contemporary and Concert Hall.

Record albums like "Classical Music For People Who Hate Classical Music" and "Classical Juke Box" will give listeners a taste of the type of music to be played by the Boston Pops Orchestra. On its fifth consecutive national tour, the orchestra boasts a repertoire which includes show tunes, symphonic and ballet music, folk music and contemporary American and European works.

Special lighting effects, formal costuming and original music will highlight the Aggie Players' reading of Sophocles' tragedy, "Antigone." Director Wiering selected for the production a new translation of the play, and theme and mood music for woodwinds, brass and tympani was composed by Allen Schrader, A&M professor of English who has studied with Juilliard School of Music staff.

500 Lectures in 10 Years
In the past 10 years, Amy Freeman Lee has given more than 500 fine arts lectures on platforms, radio and television throughout the United States. Her paintings have been represented in 240 exhibitions in 26 states, and in New Zealand and France. In addition to her talk, the Creative Arts committee will sponsor an exhibition of her paintings in the MSC Promenade area Feb. 1-14.

At 24, Philippe Entremont is making his fifth transcontinental tour as a concert pianist, including reappearances with the Dallas, Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne, Philadelphia and Atlanta symphonies. In (See FINE ARTS Page 5)

Daniel Names Three to Serve On A&M Board

Three new members were named to A&M's Board of Directors by Gov. Price Daniel Saturday in Austin.

The new directors are Sterling C. Evans of Houston, John W. Newton of Beaumont and John Biggs of Vernon.

They are replacing W. T. Doherty of Houston, J. Harold Dunn of Amarillo and Jack Finney of Greenville, whose terms of office expired this month. Doherty was chairman of the board at the time of resignation. Dunn was industrial executive.

Evans, Class of '21, is president of the Federal Land Bank of Houston, trustee of the A&M Research Foundation, and a trustee of the Student Loan Fund.

Newton, Class of '12, is vice president and manager of the Magnolia Petroleum Refining Co. He was a member of the board several years ago.

Biggs, who is not a Former Student, is manager of the Waggoner Estate in Vernon.

Appointment of the trio is pending the approval of the Texas Senate.

In announcing the new appointments, Daniel said he was following established policy of not reappointing present members for a second 6-year term.

CS Mothers Set March on Polio

College Station mothers will march against polio next Wednesday night between 7 and 8 in the annual "Mothers' March for the March of Dimes."

Mrs. Grace Martin, chairman of the event, urged all donors in College Station to leave their porch lights on between the designated hours in order that a volunteer worker might collect the donations.

Funds from the march will be used as part of College Station's contribution in the March of Dimes campaign.

Boston Pops Play In Coliseum Feb. 2

The Boston Pops, one of the most popular touring orchestras in the United States, will be presented Monday, Feb. 2, in G. Rollie White Coliseum by Town Hall as part of the first annual A&M Fine Arts Festival.

This is the sixth consecutive tour being made by the orchestra which began the trips in 1952.

Under the direction of Arthur Fiedler, who has been director of the group for the past 20 years, the Pops has been a recording artist for RCA Victor records for over 20 years. They were listed first by RCA Victor all-time best sellers, with 16 different numbers. Fiedler, a native of Boston, is the son of the first violinist with the Boston Symphony. His first music lessons were given him by his mother.

He studied music in Vienna and later in Berlin at the Royal Academy. When World War I broke out, Fiedler returned to the United States where he joined the Boston Symphony as a violinist.

In 1930 Fiedler assumed conductorship of the Boston Pops Concert, a feature of Boston musical life since 1885.

Tickets may be obtained at the Department of Student Activities in the YMCA.

Post-Game Brawl Aired

Ag-Baylor Feud Talk Passed on to Students

After two hours of heated discussion last Friday, representatives of Baylor and A&M agreed to refer the growing problem of tension between the two schools to a committee of students which is slated to meet here Feb. 7.

Most of Friday's meeting was devoted to airing both sides of the squabble which erupted after a basketball game in Waco Jan. 13. One Aggie was hospitalized after several brief scuffles between students of the two schools.

Representing the Waco University at the meeting was W. C. Perry, dean of men, and two of his assistants, "Bucky" Qualls and Travis DuBois. The three expressed a desire to patch the troubles between A&M and Baylor, saying they were willing to forgive and forget—to do "anything that is fair."

Representing A&M at the meeting were Col. Joe E. Davis, commandant; Bennie A. Zinn, director of Student Personnel Services; Robert O. Murray, director of Student Affairs; Barlow (Bones) Irvin, assistant athletic director; W. L. Penberthy, director of Student Activities; and four students—John Thomas, president of the Student Senate; Thomas Beckett, president of the Civilian Student Senate; Don Cloud, Corps commander; and Joe Buser, editor of The Battalion.

Describing the events leading up to the incident in Waco, Perry said:

"There was a lot of yelling at the game on both sides. Most of the trouble afterwards was spearheaded by two or three Aggies who were 'pretty well stewed'."

"Without the help of one Aggie senior (Charles Messer, 2nd Regiment inspector general from Tyler) there would have been more trouble."

Perry said an estimated $10 damage was done to shrubs around Baylor's student union building by scuffling Aggies who were "begged to leave." He estimated that "250 Aggies participated in the brawl, outnumbering the Baylor students about 3 to 1."

Some question arose as to the number of students involved in the fracas. All four A&M students at the meeting expressed doubt that A&M outnumbered Baylor.

At the suggestion of Penberthy, the group decided to refer the question to student leaders from both schools. It was agreed that both seniors and juniors would be selected to represent the two colleges in order to allow next year's leaders to be in on the discussion.

Seventh Annual

Businessmen Start Conference Sunday

Thirty-five executives from business and industrial firms enter A&M Sunday as students in the Seventh Executive Development Course sponsored by the Division of Business Administration.

The course continues through Feb. 14.

Students registered for the three-week training are receiving intensive instruction in five major areas affecting business and industrial operations—management administration, accounting and finance, business measurements, marketing management and personnel administration.

The case study approach to many of these problems is utilized in the course this year, as in past years, with a visiting faculty, composed of outstanding men from business and industry, acting as lecturers on problems that have arisen during their careers.

Students are men termed as "promotable executives" within their firms, and they use discussion and question-and-answer periods after each visiting lecturer's address in order to find methods of applying principles learned to their own company problems.

Students in this year's course will be welcomed at a dinner at

Governor Raises Own Personal Tax

AUSTIN—Gov. Price Daniel asked the Legislature Wednesday to raise his personal taxes 20 cents a day. Daniel doesn't smoke, but he chews cigars—now tax free. He said he chews or gives away 20 nickle cigars daily. If the Legislature approves the tax he recommended it will cost him an extra penny for each cigar.

Cecil B. De Mille Dies

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Cecil Blount De Mille, a founder of the Hollywood film industry and the most successful of all movie makers, died of a heart attack Wednesday at 77.

It was the third serious heart attack for the producer-director, whose name became a symbol of flamboyant films. He suffered the first in Egypt in November 1954, during location scenes for his last great biblical epic, "The Ten Commandments." He refused doctors' advice to stop the film, saying, "I'll continue working until God wants me to quit."

Last June he suffered another attack. But in December he undertook a strenuous tour to exploit the last film he supervised, "The Buccaneer." The end came at 5:30 a. m. at his Hollywood home with his daughter Cecilia and her husband, Joseph Harper at his bedside.

Democrats Have "Budgetary Schizophrenia"

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower diagnosed Democrat criticism of his 77-million-dollar budget Wednesday as a case of "budgetary schizophrenia."

Eisenhower told a news conference some call the budget too big, others complain it is too small—"They are on all sides of it." Schizophrenia is a mental disorder popularly called split personality.

On this and several other topics woven into the session with newsmen, Eisenhower was inclined to be more positive than usual.

Governor Offers Plan to Legislature

AUSTIN—Gov. Price Daniel Wednesday gave the Legislature a mass of figures and a maze of fiscal routes which he said would wipe out the deficit by Aug. 31 and balance the budget for the next two years.

He proposed new or increased taxes on four items and drew warm applause when he said his planned levy on natural gas would give Texas a fair share return on its own product which northern and eastern states now tax heavily.

Daniel also was given hearty handclaps when he lashed out at President Eisenhower's proposed federal gasoline tax boost. He is organizing the other governors to fight it, he said, and if anybody adds to this tax it should be the state.
