Need More Like Them

In the School of Agriculture ground is being broken everyday to insure that they will not be wanton in the balance of enrollment next fall.

Yesterday the School's council hosted 40 junior college agriculture students to a one-day tour of our facilities. There was no "arm-twisting" to get their names on our roll—none was needed. A quick once-over of the excellent facilities at A&M was enough to convince the young men really interested in getting the very best education.

As an added attraction, they presented an agriculture conclave last night headed by Board Member Sterling C. Evans, former president of the Federal Land Bank in Houston. It is another example of their School.

Earlier this semester in conjunction with the Department of Journalism they sponsored the nation's first Agricultural News Communications Conference. It is more proof of their earnest desire to improve their School and consequently their college.

Our congratulations to Dean G. W. Watson and his hard-working staff—they are the kind of men we need. We cannot have too many people working earnestly to put Texas A&M back where it belongs—number one college of its kind—anywhere.

Letters To The Editor

The Battalion welcomes letters to the editor but reserves the right to edit letters for brevity, clearness and accuracy. Short letters stand a better chance for publication since space is at a premium. Unsigned letters will not be published.

Ex Says 'Amen'

Editor,
The Battalion:

As an Aggie-ex of "Ol' Army" days I have been following the recent campaign to minimize harassment of freshmen with considerable interest.

I would like to compliment you on sound, well written editorials, add my "amen" to them that wish you and all others working on this campaign to really improve A&M lots of luck.

Mom Disagrees

Editor,
The Battalion:

... Being an Aggie mother I think that I can speak about hazing at A&M.

Our two sons never come home complaining about it—in fact we always had a good laugh about everything that happened.

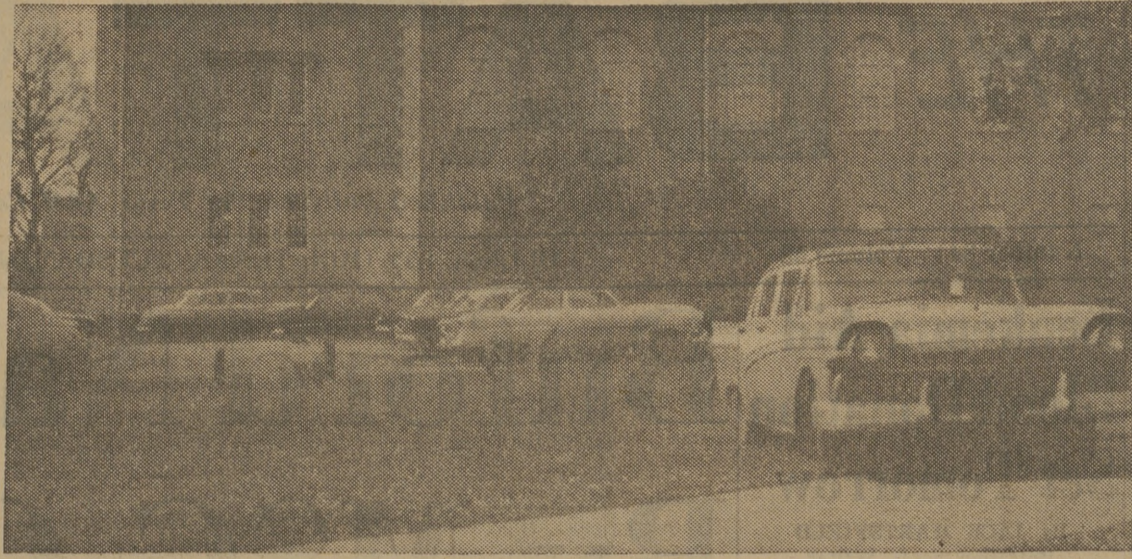

What are the boys that can't take it going to do when the army calls them? Is "mom" going to complain to Uncle Sam?

Keep the traditions and let the pampered boys go to another school.

If the desire to learn is instilled in a child when he starts to school no one has to worry about him when he reaches 18.

Failure in anything is no disgrace—the disgrace comes when you don't try again.

Yeah, Man, Parking Problems!

Parking situations may not be quite as bad as this car parked on the Guion Hall side-walk illustrates, but it is a pain around A&M. (The car above got a ticket.)

Proposed Buildings Keep Paving From Some Lots

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of articles designed to answer student's questions concerning the parking situation on the A&M campus.)

By BILL REED
Battalion News Editor

Several obstacles seem to be deterring the paving of student parking areas.

First of all, last summer the proper gravel and needed materials could not be obtained to put the parking lots in top condition, so work was postponed until materials could be obtained. Now, paving the lots has been re-scheduled to start when the weather gets warmer.

But there is still another important reason for the delay. Some of the areas will be replaced by buildings sometime in the future.

According to college improvement plan several buildings will replace some of the lots.

New Petroleum Building
The first building that is scheduled to be built is the new $650,000 Petroleum Engineering Building, which will be located just east of the present Petroleum-Geology Building.

Part of the Day Student parking lot behind the petroleum building will be occupied by part of the building, cutting the parking capacity of the large lot.

The new petroleum building is scheduled for completion by Jan. 1, 1960, according to T. R. Spence, manager of the System Office of Physical Plants.

E. D. Building
Students have asked why the vacant corner behind the chemistry and engineering buildings has not been paved for use as a parking lot. This is another new building site.

Plans are on the drawing board for a new Engineering Drawing Building. When the building is complete the area surrounding it will probably be used for parking space.

Still farther in the future is a whole new quadrangle of dormitories. This new dormitory area is planned on the present site of the Navasota parking area.

By the time these buildings are completed, new parking areas will probably be developing to replace the ones that are destroyed.
