

Aggies Divide Pair In Weekend Baseball

The Aggie baseball team, coached by Tom Chandler, had to come from behind Friday to win their first game of the season on Kyle Field against the University of Houston Cougars, but then dropped a game to Sam Houston Saturday.

The weekend split gave the Farmers a 1-2 mark so far this season. They won the Friday game by a 7-2 score while losing the Saturday tilt 9-5.

Sophomore Larry Ayres saved the Houston game when he came on in the fifth inning and pitched four scoreless frames after starter Joe Brooks Thompson allowed one run against the Cougars.

A&M scored in the fourth inning on a walk, single and infield fly to go ahead. Sam Houston throttled the Aggie nine for the second time this season behind the steady pitching of Pat Centilli who held the Cadets to seven scattered hits while striking out eight.

Chandler used four pitchers against the Bearcats before the game finally crawled to a halt in the bottom of the ninth when the Aggies tried to stage a last minute rally which fell short.

Moundsmen for the Farmers were Wayne Schaper, Percy Sanderson, Donnie Hullum and James Vrba. The Sam Houston batsmen swung at will, pounding three homeruns in one inning.

A&M opened their scoring when Wendel Reed dashed home in the second after Dick Hickerson had slashed a triple. Reed had advanced on an error.

The Bearcats came out swinging in the third when Centilli, Gerald Walling and Harold Hoffmann all slammed homers.

Hickerson scored in the fourth frame for A&M to make the score read 5-3. But in the eighth, Sam Houston scored four more runs.

Schaper was credited with the loss for A&M while Centilli took the win, his second over the Aggies this season. A&M will play its fourth game of the season here Wednesday against Texas Lutheran College.

Army Shells Air Force, 15-0 In 12th Man Bowl Saturday

By FRED MEURER
Battalion Managing Editor

A souped-up version of Army mules stomped a bunch of sputtering P-40's right out of the jet age Saturday night on Kyle Field.

Figuratively speaking, that's what happened when the Army ROTC gridders ran roughshod over the Air Force cadets in the 12th Man Bowl, 15-0. Unofficially, the outcome was classed as an upset.

From the time the Air Force's Bob Dunn couldn't find the handle on the opening kickoff and was downed on his own 6, until the Army's Poy Royder galloped 47 yards in the last quarter for his second touchdown, the Ground-Pounders dominated play.

Royder was the big name for the Army. The junior from Dayton also romped 34 yards in the first period for the other Army touchdown. After that first tally, sophomore center Bobby Botard of Alice converted.

The other two points for the Army came when Guard Jimmy Garrett blocked Merle Lock's attempted punt and the pigskin rolled out of the end zone for a safety.

On the other side of the fence, the Air Force never could get a serious threat going. A hard-charging Army line found the heavier Air Force off balance and time after time poured molasses into their offensive machine.

Adding a bit of spark to an otherwise dull evening for the losers were occasional thrusts by such Air Force backs as Lock, Cliff Hamby, Vernon Yanta and James Spikes. Though he never did engineer a score, quarterback Bobby Singer did a commendable job in guiding the Air Force.

But despite all efforts, the Fly-boys couldn't halt the steady efforts of backs Perry Pope, Royder, Calvin Brummett, Jerry Morgan and Johnny Winder, to name only a few. Quarterbacks Joe Flood and Sonny Todd also hit four of six aerials for 31 yards. The Air Force draw a goose egg in that department.

At first the Army capitalized on breaks, such as the opening kickoff and the Coffin Corner punt by Royder which crossed the sidelines on the 2. After they once scored, however, there was no holding them regardless of fate's tricks. Penalties hurt both teams on occasions.

Heading Army defensive play were ends Grady Barr and Tom Bailey, guard Jimmy Garrett and Botard. Air Force standouts were tackle Paul Barsotti and guards Bud Gentle and Clarence Pennywell.

Unfortunately, the cool weather Saturday night wasn't due to an excess of fans in the stands. An unusually light turnout witnessed the annual Student Senate-sponsored contest. The Wharton Junior College Stars performed at halftime.
