Civilians Have Top 'Weekend'

Members of the Civilian Student Council met last night in the Senate Chamber of the Memorial Student Center and were told that the 1959 Civilian Weekend was the most successful "Weekend" to date. The most surprising success obtained by this year's event was in the money-making department. For the first time in the Civilian Weekend's short history, a profit of $111.88 was listed on the books. In past years the Civilian Weekend had always lost money. The event was over a $300 failure last year, and it was believed that if such happened again, the "Weekend" would be banished. Each member on the Council was congratulated for his efforts by Charles Graham, who was acting as president in place of Tommy Beckett. However, Graham mentioned that more councilmen were needed to take part in the event. He pointed out that many of the councilmen were not present at either the dance or the barbecue. He said that there was no excuse for a member of the Civilian Student

Moore Stages Fight Against Arlington

Backs Amendment To Make All-Male

AUSTIN (CP)—Sen. William T. Moore of Bryan continued his fight yesterday against the tentatively approved bill elevating Arlington State College to four-year status. He offered an amendment to make Arlington an all-male college.

Sen. Doyle Willis of Fort Worth moved that the amendment be tabled and it was killed 22-2. The Arlington bill was engrossed on voice vote but on a vote to suspend constitutional rules to allow immediate passage the Senate voted 17-9, which was not enough.

Sen. Moore an Aggie-ex of the Class of '40, introduced one amendment which was ruled out of order. It would have made A&M co-educational.

"If the board thinks it needs a he-man school at College Station they need one at Arlington, too. If they are going to run the show, let's give them what they want," said Moore. He had said that if the A&M board "is allowed to continue its ruinous policies in another five years A&M will have one classroom for each student." He predicted the bill eventually would have the effect of placing A&M as a branch of Arlington, located in fast growing Fort Worth-Dallas area.

Sen. Dorsey Hardeman of San Angelo argued that A&M had dormitory and classroom space for 4,000 more students now and that the state should not be burdened with another senior school. Moore's blasts followed in the wake of a filibuster Wednesday which ended minutes before midnight on another House approved proposal allowing the Legislature to set the interest rates on loans and license lenders. The bill was engrossed but no attempt was made to push it to final completion. The three major proposals still will remain at the top of the Senate calendar for consideration early next week.

A&M Consolidated Hosts Play Meet

A&M Consolidated High School will be the host school for the District 21-AA one-act plays Monday at 5 p. m.

Five schools will enter plays in the contest, the first one to be held in a host high school auditorium. The schools entering will be Schulenberg, Bellville, A&M Consolidated, Cypress-Fairbanks and Navasota. The plays will be presented in that order.

Dr. Loren Winship, chairman of the Department of Drama at the University of Texas, will be the critic judge.

Two visiting schools have submitted the names of the plays they will present. Schulenberg will give "The Importance of Being Earnest" and Cypress-Fairbanks will present "The Glass Menagerie."

A&M Consolidated will present "Last Flight Over," a tragic-comedy concerning a farm family about to be broken after the death of the mother. The scene is a farm house overcome with sadness by the death of the mother, and the eldest son is leaving home. The son is determined to become an engineer and his father wants him to stay with the farm. The play is centered around the struggle between the two.

Pa is played by Michael Gay. He is a typical farmer, proud of having brought his land from a wilderness to its present productive state. Dave, played by David Delaney, is the eldest son who wants to leave home.

Jenny, the youngest sister, is portrayed by Ann Williamson. The older sister, Matilda, is played by Patricia Jackson. The neighboring farmer's wife, Sary, is played by Mary Varvel.

Admission for the plays is 50 cents.

WASHINGTON—NATO's European commander strongly backed Thursday the no-retreat-in-Berlin line taken by the alliance's foreign ministers.

But Gen. Lauris Norstad, supreme allied commander in Europe, also urged Congress to keep foreign aid moving so his forces could make up for their small numbers with the best nuclear and other modern weapons.

Norstad urged the House Foreign Affairs Committee to approve President Eisenhower's nearly four billion-dollar foreign aid program.
