200 Relay Engineers Meet In Annual Convention Here

More than 200 persons throughout the United States have registered for the 12th annual Conference for Protective Relay Engineers now being held at A&M.

The sessions got under way yesterday afternoon and will last through tomorrow.

Dr. Glen D. Hallmark, head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, the sponsoring department, gave the welcome address. Norman F. Rode, Department of Electrical Engineering, chaired the afternoon session.

"Twenty years ago," Hallmark said, "few of us were aware of a relatively small group studying applications of electromagnetic field theory to communication in the very high frequency range. During World War II this work received tremendous emphasis in the development of radar and subsequently the techniques have been applied to a variety of problems such as microwave relaying, television and other forms of communication.

"The development of computers and simulation techniques during the last 20 years has had a tremendous impact on our profession. Most of you know of our active interest here at A&M in this field.

"Twenty years ago," Hallmark also cited, "work was just beginning in the application of servomechanisms to instrumentation and control. This has resulted in a whole new technology in automation and control of industrial processes and machines; 15 years ago, most of us were not aware of the tremendous impact that atomic and nuclear energy was destined to have on our profession; 11 years ago we had the first announcement of the development of the transistor which has opened up an entirely new field to electrical engineers.

"More recently the development of guided missiles has required the talents of many of our engineers and it now appears that the design, control and communication problems of space vehicles will require many more of our technical people."

New Jersey has 81 commercial airports.

ENTER OFTEN - HAVE FUN - AND WIN! But think carefully! This puzzle is not as easy as it looks. At first the DOWN and ACROSS clues may appear simple. There may appear to be more than one "right" answer. For example, the clue might read: "Many a coed will be given her best date's P-N." Either "T" (PIN) or "E" (PEN) would seem to fit. But only one answer is apt and logical as decided by the judging staff, and therefore correct. Read the rules carefully. ENTER AS OFTEN AS YOU WISH. Good luck!
