U.S. Labels Soviet Request 'Propaganda'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States scornfully turned down Wednesday a Soviet request that this country halt its buildup of nuclear missiles capability for West Germany pending negotiations over Germany's future.

"Completely hypocritical . . . propaganda effort," a State Department spokesman said of the Soviet proposal.

The Soviet bid was made in a note which the Kremlin sent to Washington Tuesday. Its rejection was the first important public move in foreign policy following the swearing in Wednesday of Christian A. Herter as secretary of state.

The events gave substance to what Herter's aides have been saying: that he will maintain the major lines of U.S. foreign policy chartered by former Secretary John Foster Dulles.

The Soviets protested against the United States supplying modern weapons, including missiles capable of delivering nuclear warheads, to West Germany and other NATO allies. The Soviets have objected many times in the past to the rearming of West Germany—a project undertaken after the Soviets started building up military-type organizations in Communist East Germany.

The Soviet note recalled that last March 26 the U.S., British and French ambassadors in Moscow told Soviet officials that any single-handed action would hurt prospects for a foreign ministers conference on Berlin and Germany. The Western ambassadors were cautioning the U.S.S.R. not to upset the present status in Berlin or make a separate peace treaty with Germany.

Teachers from Seven States To Attend Summer Institute

Almost a hundred junior and senior high school teachers from seven states and Puerto Rico will come to A&M this summer for advanced training in science and mathematics.

They have received grants to attend the fourth annual Summer Institute for Junior and Senior High School Teachers, sponsored by A&M from funds from the National Science Foundation and industries operating in Texas.

The teachers — coming from Texas, Arkansas, West Virginia,

Louisiana, New York, Colorado, Florida and Puerto Rico — will attend one or both terms of the institute for advanced preparation in such courses as chemistry, biology, oceanography, meteorology, astronomy, mathematics, physics, geology and earth history.

First term of the summer institute is scheduled from June 8 to July 17. The second term begins July 20 and ends August 28.

A number of the teachers will attend both terms although they have been awarded grants to cover expenses of just one term. The grants will provide $75 per week and $15 a week for each dependent to a maximum of four, travel expenses of 4 cents a mile for round trip with a maximum of $8 plus funds for tuition and fees.

Courses and activities of the institute, which will be conducted under the direction of Dr. J. G. Potter, head of the Department of Physics, are especially designed to meet the subject matter needs of junior and senior high school teachers of science and mathematics and will provide the opportunity for the teachers to learn of recent developments in these fields.

Each course will carry three semester hours of academic credit applicable on the degree, Master of Education, Science Option.

The program will include weekly lectures by national leaders in various fields of science and mathematics, and other events, such as field trips in the biological and earth sciences, visits to the nuclear reactor, isotope tracer laboratories, electron microscopy laboratory, IBM 704 and other computer laboratories on the campus.

The science courses will include a liberal amount of laboratory exercises accounting for approximately one of the semester credit hours.

Dr. Ide P. Trotter Attends Cotton Research Meeting

Dr. Ide P. Trotter, associate dean of the Graduate School, attended at meeting recently of the Fellowship Committee of the Foundation for Cotton Research and Education in Memphis, Tenn.

This is one of the activities of the National Cotton Council of America.

This Fellowship Committee handles the granting of fellowships in cotton ginning engineering.

"The recipients work on a Master of Science degree in agricultural engineering with emphasis on the science and practice of cotton ginning," Trotter says.

"Only recently has it been recognized that in order to retain the best qualities of the cotton grown throughout the South much more scientific training must be available to some of our young people to enable them to operate our existing cotton ginning equipment most efficiently and also to be able to design newer and better machinery for ginning cotton," he said.

Trotter has served on this committee since its inception in his capacity as extension consultant on personnel and professional improvement for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Others on the committee represent the University of Georgia and prominent cotton growers from Alabama, Arkansas and Arizona.

At the meeting four fellowships were authorized. Each recipient will receive $2,500 for one year's study. Most of them are or will become, cotton ginning specialists with state or federal organizations which in turn use them to service and train operators of gins throughout the United States.

TTI Engineers Make Tests On New Pavement

Research engineers of the Texas Transportation Institute at A&M recently conducted tests on a new roadway paving material called slag, which is the by-product of burned lignite.

Tests on the new material were conducted in conjunction with the Rockdale plant of the Aluminum Co. of America. Using slag produced by the plant in their manufacture of aluminum, the institute's engineers laid two sections of test pavement on Highway 6 and Oaklawn Street in Bryan.

The new material, in addition to being cheap and easily available, was found to produce an improved road surface with quiet, nonskid features.

The Rockdale aluminum plant produces 450 tons of slag daily during the process of burning lignite. Previous to the tests made by the institute, the slag was discarded as waste.

Research Topic Heads Field Day

"Research in Agriculture Works for Everybody" will be the topic for discussion at the upcoming Farm and Ranch Club Field Day next Thursday.

Some techniques which will continue to revolutionize the agricultural industry will be demonstrated, said Dr. R. C. Potts, assistant dean of agriculture.

The visitors will see demonstrations on such subjects as screw worm control, how 200,000 pounds of tomatoes can be produced from a single acre and how scientific equipment is used in modern agricultural research laboratories.

The program will get under way at 9 a. m. in the Memorial Student Center and will be concluded by 3:30 p. m.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting Potts.
