Driver Education Technique At A&M Discribed in Article

Driver education technique at A&M was described in an article in the May, 1959, issue of Ford Motor Company's Driver Education News.

The article, entitled "Talking the Road," was written by Dr. Leslie V. Hawkins, associate professor of industrial education at A&M.

Dr. Hawkins wrote that "to impress upon the beginning driver the necessity of 'reading' the road—or seeing what lies ahead—we have used the technique of requesting the students to tell us what they see as they drive."

As the student driver progresses along the road or street, he describes what he sees. Some examples are: "Stop sign ahead," "Two pedestrians walking on the right," "Car parked at the curb," "Car approaching fast from the rear," "Speed limit 25 miles per hour."

It was explained that this technique works very well in making the student aware of the necessity of reading the road ahead of the car and establish the habit of observing the surroundings which might affect driving conditions.

Dr. Hawkins said this system gives the instructor a basis upon which to determine what the student is seeing. It will tell whether the student is keeping his eyes moving and observing what lies ahead, to the sides and behind him. Also, the instructor is able to determine whether or not the student is using "aim-high vision" by how far ahead he is describing the road.

Marketing Aggies Given Scholarships

The awards were made by the Houston Sales Executive Club to John Michael Brazzel of 213 Stratford, Houston, and William Windsor Waggoner of 2005 Smyth, Plainview.
