

Fish Antics Again Create Amusement

As is always the case this time of year, the newness of the campus and campus life has caused some very amusing incidents concerning the freshmen.

This year's freshman class, like their predecessors, has been noted wandering around the dorms and the campus with a dazed, panic-stricken expression on its face.

One 2nd Brigade freshman was in a near frenzy Wednesday night when he couldn't figure out why he had to make out a pass for weekend leave to go to church Sunday.

In the same brigade, there was the freshman who casually sauntered up to a senior and calmly asked, "Got a match?"

Then there was the freshman who was walking across the campus without a cap on. An upperclassman asked him if he had a hat. To this the startled fish answered, "Yes, sir. My Stetson's back in my room."

Oh, well, maybe a Stetson was the only hat he knew until he came to Aggieland.

One member of the Class of '63, with a severe case of Aggieitis, arrived with senior boots in hand and wanted to know if he could wear them to the Orientation Week meetings.

Tuesday when the first Battalion's were delivered to the dorms, a fish was instructed to put one copy under each door. An upperclassman went to take a shower. Sure enough, each shower room was supplied with two copies of The Battalion.

A recent call to the Dorm 2 Guardroom got this response from the freshman private of the guard. "Hello, Dorm Room 2 Guard, Guard Smith Private, speaking, sir." It was all there, but in somewhat confused form.

When the table seating arrangements were made for the various outfits, one fish tapped on a senior's shoulder and very distressedly said, "Sir, you've got my seat."

So go things this early for the Class of '63.

Khrushchev Sports Many Faces, Views

By JAMES MARLOW Associated Press News Analyst WASHINGTON — (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev — after one of the most amazing performances in history—is nearing the end of his American expedition. But what kind of a man has he shown himself to be?

He's many things — some of which may prove good, some not—but above all he's a man of contradictions. Yet, he is the man with whom President Eisenhower must sit down with this weekend in a search for peace for the world.

He talks disarmament but, while he invites us to the moon, he won't let inspectors inside the Soviet Union to make disarmament possible. He says "I am not afraid of the devil" but there's no sign he ever dared oppose mass-murder Stalin.

He's an atheist who talks constantly of a deity, offers to swear on the Bible, cites the Commandment against killing, says the Soviets are "brothers before Christ" and for good measure throws in: "God is on our side."

He's a braggart but he is also an optimist and this more than anything else in his charter—a belief going back to young manhood that the world can be made wonderful—may hold out the best hope of dealing with him reasonably.

He's as unpredictable as a character out of Dostoevsky and his gigantic display of energy is almost like a deliberate effort to identify himself as one of these "men of might," the great folk heroes in his nation's early epic songs.

He's intelligent, he's shrewd, but he's neither an intellectual nor a Marxian theorist. He is a rock-ribbed Communist, but he is also a pragmatist. This part of his nature also may hold hope for the future.

Since he is for a practical way of doing things—and trying to do them better—he may, deliberately or not, divert communism a little more to the right and make doing business with him a little more possible.

He is one of the most powerful men in the world, as everyone knows, but he is forever trying to remind the world of it. He doesn't need publicity but he never stops seeking it.

He's a premier but he is also as much of a showman as a barker at a circus. He says the United States "wants to obtain world domination" but he also says the United States doesn't want to change the social order in the Soviet Union.

SHE LOOKED IT UP
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) Locally prominent attorney Raymond F. Bossmeyer was surprised recently when a neighbor's child addressed him as "fatty." Bossmeyer is a bit stout, but not fat. The child explained she got the name from the telephone directory, where the attorney is listed as: "Bossmeyer, Raymond F. atty..."
