

Worth Mentioning

By Johnny Johnson

"A truly fine institution with a wonderful spirit" were the words Robert F. Kennedy used to describe his impression of Texas A&M to me last night.

The former chief counsel to the Senate Selects of Improper Activities in the Labor or Management Field was talking informally after a dinner in his honor by the Memorial Student Center Great Issues Committee last night.

Kennedy spoke here last night as the third speaking engagement of four planned talks at Texas colleges and universities. Earlier this week he spoke at Southern Methodist University and the University of Texas and will speak at Rice Institute later this week.

Credit for the tour goes to J. Wayne Stark, director of the MSC, and to the Hon. Olin E. Teague, '32. For the last couple of tours the Great Issues Committee has been trying to get Kennedy to come here and speak. It was only through the efforts of Stark in getting the cooperation of the three other schools and the work of Teague that this talk was accomplished.

The Great Issues Committee headed by Mike McGuire deserves a large thanks for the arrangements of Kennedy's stop at Texas A&M. Wally Cannon is vice chairman of the group and Kenneth Demel headed the selection committee. Robert Nichols and Joe Lindley are co-chairmen of the arrangements committee. Reed Armstrong is in charge of publicity and Doyce Nance is program chairman.

The presentation of Kennedy was only the first of three announced presentations by the committee for the 1959-60 school year. Brooks Hays, former Arkansas congressman, and Ernest K. Lindley, Washington editor for News-week magazine, are the other two speakers announced.

The full house in Guion Hall served as a vote of confidence for the committee which is under study by the MSC Council as to its cultural value.

Few people who were in Guion Hall last night could deny that the value of hearing a man like Kennedy speak in person is an invaluable addition to the culture and education of a college student.

The Battalion takes this opportunity to express appreciation to Stark, Teague, the Great Issues Committee and all others connected with Kennedy's appearance here. It was certainly a job well-done and another of the things that make Texas A&M a great institution.

The Houston Press chose to commend the Aggies in its editorial columns last Friday.

The editorial was very praising of Texas A&M and is worth reprinting for the benefit of those Aggies who were unable to read it in The Press.

"Some 4,000 members of the Texas A&M College cadet corps will spread over Houston this week-end.

North Side, West Side, South End and East End—wherever you are, you'll see trim, clean-faced, khaki-clad youngsters. Most of them will have pretty and excited young ladies on their arms. They wear the face of Texas. They come from the Panhandle to the Valley... from the Pineywoods to the Big Bend. Their pride in their heritage flashes like a banner unfurled.

The Aggies have so much spirit, they export it. It's never just a football game when the Cadet Corps is in the stands. Their support for their footballers is so strong and so sustained they wrap the whole stadium in their fire and enthusiasm.

The fact that their beloved Aggies are contesting Rice for the cellar, not the championship as has so often happened, doesn't mean a thing. The "12th Man" will be there in full voice, primed to do their best to "gig 'em." That's also why 60,000 people will be in
