Texas A&M secured a place on the rolls of important events in the 1960's—a decade predicted by many people to be one of the most dramatic in the history of man—with the opening of the Data Processing Center here this afternoon.

The opening of the Nuclear Research Center expected early in 1961 will clinch Texas A&M's place in educational history.

Key Witness Tells of Death At Finch Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The state's key witness, a slim, 19-year-old Swedish housemaid, burst into tears on the witness stand after describing Barbara Finch's violent last moments of life.

As Marie Anne Lindholm testified softly in broken English, Dr. R. Bernard Finch leaned forward intently at the counsel table, straining to hear every word.

Near the handsome surgeon, his onetime receptionist and mistress, Carole Tregoff, sat erect, her brown eyes flashing from witness to prosecutor and back.

Finch, 41, and Miss Tregoff, 23, are charged with murdering his 36-year-old estranged wife so they could marry and retain community property valued by Mrs. Finch at $750,000.

Miss Lindholm came to this country in September, 1958, to study English. A girl acquaintance found her a job with the Finches.

She told a six-man, six-woman jury and a packed courtroom on direct examination Wednesday of the hectic night of July 18 at the Finches' swank home in suburban West Covina.

This was her testimony: She heard Mrs. Finch scream, ran to the garage of the $65,000 Finch home, and saw the pretty, tennis-loving socialite unconscious on the garage floor.

Texas Building Fund Grows From Confederate Pension

AUSTIN (AP)—Texans still are being taxed to pay Confederate pensions but most of the money is pouring into the state's building program.

Another million dollars or so will be transferred from the fund to the State Building Commission later this month, officials in the state comptroller's office said today.

A year ago $1,510,560 was transferred. During the last fiscal year ending Aug. 31, some $2,925 was paid out of the funds for pensions to retired Texas Rangers and $240,019 went to those on the Confederate pension rolls.

The pension of $80 a month to retired Texas Rangers and their widows went into effect late in the period. In the past month the Confederate pension division of the comptroller's office paid out $80 to 86 persons on the roll, $6,880 in all.

Confederate pensions totaled $17,725 during the past month. The state has one more financial obligation to the late Walter Williams, last surviving veteran of the Civil War. A mortuary claim of up to $200 will be sent out later this month in lieu of his $300 a month pension.

The ranks of the Confederate veterans' widows dwindles by the month. At present, 168 widows, who average about 90 years of age, draw $100 a month pensions and nine widows, living in the Confederate Women's Home here, draw $25 a month. The women were many years younger than their husbands when they married.

The thinning of the ranks is reflected in the diminishing outlay of money by the fund. For the previous fiscal year, the payments totaled $277,907. In fiscal 1957 it was $338,425; in 1956 it totaled $388,826 and in 1955, $462,095 was paid.

Besides monthly pensions, the state pays a mortuary claim of $200 to the undertaker or relatives of the deceased.

The Confederate Men's Home here is still operated by the state as a state hospital for senile patients. Gov. Price Daniel vetoed last year an appropriation to build a new Confederate home which had been authorized by the Legislature.
