Harrington Delegate

Jet orientation rides for delegates to the Institutional-USAFA Conference held recently at Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala., were part of the two day program. Here Dr. M. T. Harrington, Chancellor of the A&M College System, prepares to take off in a T-33 jet trainer.

BSU Schedules Miles Pierce As Emphasis Speaker Tonight

The "Dedicated Vocations" emphasis speaker at Baptist Student Union Vespers 7 p.m. Tuesday will be Miles Pierce, a sheep rancher from Alpine, Texas, according to Jim Manley, BSU program chairman.

Pierce, a 1944 A&M graduate, is owner of the oldest and largest Rambouillet breeding flock in the Southwest. Pierce Rambouillets are also noted as a show flock, having won 90 per cent of all the Grand Champions and First Premiums throughout Texas' major breeding shows for the past five years. Pierce and his father, V. I. Pierce of Ozona, have the distinction of being the first sheep raisers to export rams and ewes by air.

Heat On Or Off in Race

Wilson To Announce Plans

AUSTIN (AP)—The heat goes on, or maybe off today in the race for governor.

Atty. Gen. Will Wilson will say at 7 p.m. whether he chooses to contest Gov. Price Daniel's bid for a third term, or whether he will try again for attorney general.

If the decision goes to the governor's race, the added heat is on Daniel.

If Wilson goes again for attorney general, House Speaker Waggoner Carr faces a formidable job in unseating the incumbent, Wilson.

Should Wilson, who won his second term as attorney general without a contest, try for a third, chances are that Carr will be his chief and perhaps only opponent. But if Wilson runs for governor, the attorney generalship is expected to be the target for several ambitious and aggressive young prosecutors in addition to Carr. Political developments stepped up in several areas as the Feb. 1 deadline for filing for a place on the May 7 Democratic primary ballot crept nearer.

Associate Justice Joe Greenhill of the State Supreme Court announced that he will seek re-election to the post which he has held since 1957.

Greenhill is a Navy veteran of World War II, is a former first assistant attorney general and practiced law in Austin with the firm of Graves, Dougherty and Greenhill.

Among the important decisions in which Greenhill wrote opinions was the case involving constitutionality of the State Urban Renewal Law. This was upheld in an unanimous decision of the Supreme Court.

"Now in my third year as a member of the court, I feel I am in a position to yield valuable service to the people of Texas," Greenhill said in announcing his candidacy.

"I am fully aware of the responsibilities that a position on the Supreme Court entails. I shall strive at all times to uphold to the fullest of my ability all the fine traditions of the court and the trust the people of Texas put in me."

Another high court candidate has filed for a place on the Democratic ballot. He is Judge Lloyd W. Davidson, a candidate for reelection to the Court of Criminal Appeals. Davidson already has two announced opponents: Jim Bowmer, Temple attorney, and Judge W. T. McDonald, Bryan.
