

Worth Mentioning

By Johnny Johnson

Woe be unto the unfortunate Aggie who doesn't have a date down for the festivities this weekend. Certainly it will be more than a full weekend with Intercollegiate Talent Show, Cafe Rue Pinale, Combat Ball, Spring Military Day Review and the Military Ball all scheduled this weekend.

Speaking of full weekends, members of the Corps of Cadets had a full morning last Saturday. After getting into Class A uniform for a review for High School Career Day then had to rush back to the dorms to prepare for drill. Fortunately the Air Force cadets had inclement weather schedule, but Army cadets had to fall out for drill complete with rifles. With a Saturday morning schedule like that every Saturday, the Corps of Cadets should qualify for quadruple commutation instead of the present double commutation.

This Saturday will certainly be a MILITARY DAY if the Corps has drill in addition to the review set Saturday afternoon. With Cafe Rue Pinale lasting until 4 a. m. Saturday cadets will have about three hours for sleeping and preparing for the drill if it is held. One advantage of having the drill would be that it would give the Aggies a chance to rest for the full schedule Saturday afternoon and night. But what about the Aggies...?

Ags who may have to drive somewhere to get their dates Saturday for the Military Ball will have a nice time. They'll have to try and drive somewhere and back to Texas A&M between drill and the review or between the review and the Military Ball. Such conditions would certainly make for highway safety.

Improvements in the table manners in the Corps of Cadets were noted High School Career Day in the dining halls. Missing was some of the lack of table manners prevalent in the past. Although there was some improvement, more attention to table and personal manners wouldn't hurt Ags, especially with a big weekend like this one coming up.

Congratulations to Alan Payne, Ags who will have to drive somewhere to get their dates Saturday for the Military Ball will have a nice time. They'll have to try and drive somewhere and back to Texas A&M between drill and the review or between the review and the Military Ball. Such conditions would certainly make for highway safety.

LETTERS

I wish to commend you and The Battalion staff for the very excellent coverage given Corps of Cadets grades in the Tuesday edition. I might well have lived in complete ignorance of the fact that Corps grades were a fraction higher than had previously been reported, had it not been for this very fine article.

Recent disclosures of cheating, carousing and sex orgies in some leading American colleges appear to bring less alumni concern than a losing football team, according to Dr. Perry E. Gresham, president of Bethany College, in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

At a meeting of Bethany alumni, Dr. Gresham said, "When an old grad return to the campus, he would do well to give some intellectual and moral encouragement to the student rather than to brag about the college pranks in which he was involved."

Gresham concluded by stating college officials need the encouragement of the alumni in their attempts to raise the level of expectancy of the campus.

A unique situation faces students of the University of Wyoming who plan to enter a summer seminar on Russian civilization.

Students registering for the course will be required to make a four-week tour of Russia, according to Dr. Eugene N. Hardy, assistant professor of the Department of History and the seminar tour director. They will receive two-four units of academic credit for the tour.

Hardy said the tour will cost each student about $1,600, leaves by jet plane June 15 and will stop at Copenhagen, Stockholm and Helsinki. In Russia, the group will visit Leningrad, Moscow and Socki on the Black Sea coast; a steamship voyage from Socki to Yalta in the Crimea; steamer to Odessa; a train trip from Odessa to Kiev; and a jet plane ride from Kiev to Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Assigned readings and term paper will complete the course.

Groups with discriminatory clauses, local or national, will be required to report annually to the Dean of Men they have made positive efforts to remove these clauses within the framework of the fraternity constitution.

The Women's Panhellenic Assn. a council of sororities, have decreed each sorority submit a copy of its constitution to the Dean of Women.

President A. Whitney Griswold of Yale stated in his annual report higher education should close the dangerous gap between scientific and non-scientific worlds, but warned the solution requires more than "crash programs" and "curricular devices."

Griswold said the immediate objective of Yale must be the advancement of pure science as opposed to applied science. He believes a smattering of arts and the sciences is worthless and does not recommend inoculating scientists with mild doses of art or art students with milder doses of science.

"Why do we have cheating and what can be done about it?" was one of the questions raised in a discussion of Faculty-Student relationships by a joint meeting of the Student Government Assn. and the Faculty Advisory Committee at Alabama College.

The council agreed cheating was a problem national in scope but when the faculty is sold on the ideal of honor and the integrity of the individual, then there is less cheating.

ROBBIE GODWIN LOOKS AT LIFE

a city and its residents in only a few seconds. The story of an American woman who survived the quake illustrates the speed with which disaster, and rescuers, can work.

Smiles, and the dental makeup thereof should interest any pre-dental majors, or any southerners (who deal with dental irregularities) are studying jaw structure (self explanatory), occlusion (the bringing of the opposing surfaces of the teeth into contact) and cephalic build (of, or pertaining to the head) of third and fourth generation southern families. They think they may differ from other norms.

Beginning this week, LIFE is introducing a column to better inform all concerned of what is contained between its covers.

This week, the first picture—the magazine is always full—is the cover shot of Princess Margaret with her fiancé, an ex-freelance photographer, Anthony Armstrong-Jones. Some of his work is shown, making an interesting gallery of unique shots on pages 91-95, ended with a curious turn of events in which Jones becomes the target of the all-seeing eye.

The other picture essay is by and about James Thurber, who offers the humorist's view of such controversial subjects as women, world madness and himself.

Life among sleepy members of the U. S. Senate in their filibuster of the civil rights issue begins a pictorial and editorial discussion of the current "Siege of Civil Rights." Harry Golden, Charlotte, N. C. publisher and writer, sheds some light on the situation in the South in his article.

Before you have turned four pages, your powers of observation are tested in a two-page picture of a lone Marine on a cliff. (Hint: he is on the first page, and if you are in the Department of Engineering you should be able to draw two lines and find him.) Any other department will probably have to read the clues at the bottom of the picture, but it all takes about the same amount of time, anyway.

A Look at the World's Week pictures an interesting sidelight to President Eisenhower's recent tour and a story-telling aerial photograph of a California train wreck. Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is shown saying "da" to an Indonesian girl's offer to dance in Bali.

Agadir, the scene of a recent earthquake which rocked the city and killed thousands of citizens, some while they prayed, is portrayed by a striking series of pictures showing what can happen to

"Music to Drop Pins by" is a new slant on music to offset the current rage of orchestrated noise which is being tried by a group of University of Detroit students. Probably some late students will be all for it, especially if it were used by some owners of hi-fi in the dorms.

"Can-Can," the film that Khrushchev called naughty, is previewed in full color by LIFE's photos. Accompanied by a story concerning some background, the show looks like it would be very colorful to say the least.

The plight of school children caught between a modern world and established tradition comes to light in an article depicting the Amish clan of Pennsylvania.

Attention Elvis Presley fans! The Pelvis left the arms of Priscilla and the country of Germany to return to the girls he left behind in America two years ago to report for duty in the Marine Corps. He received a hero's welcome, all of which is shown by the story-pictures in LIFE.

"The great Quest of Robert Jones" is the feature depicting how the memories of a fabulous heard in the Arizona desert leads an ex-GI—and the army—to a tantalizing search for gold. For all you goldbricks, and gold seekers, this tops off an interesting and informative LIFE for this week.
