Education TV Gets Trial in Galveston

GALVESTON (AP)—A new approach to educational television usage beamed over a technically new kind of electronics equipment was switched into action in public elementary schools here recently.

American educators already are eyeing both the new educational approach and the equipment techniques, according to Jim Hardie, supervisor of the instructional resources department for Galveston Public Schools.

Hardie said the venture could erase some of the major snags which have plagued educational television since its inception in Philadelphia in 1948.

Actual usage of the system differs from the usual iron-clad scheduled courses set for specific times in specific grades in that presentations are requested from the teacher to supplement needs of the students.

Using Phonoscopes

Instead of the one-way TV set, the Galveston system is using Phonoscopes, a two-way audio and visual communication link tied in with coaxial cables with which it is possible to tie in each of the 11 phonoscopes in the eight elementary schools for one session.

The entire system is easily operated through a specially designed switchboard.

Hardie said it is possible that four of the top problems of educational television being experienced in the nation today could be solved with Phonoscope. These problems are the high cost of installation and operation, the need for trained technical personnel, the limitations of one-way communication and the rigidity of scheduling of televised presentations.

High Costs Absorbed

The high cost of installation and operation was absorbed by Phonoscope, Inc., which is organized as a utility service for the city of Galveston. The organization arranged a first-year tariff-free contract with the schools for their evaluation, and has offered a fee of $14,000 next year for equipment rental.

Phonoscope will maintain and service all equipment, and, as newly designed equipment is manufactured, it will be installed. This eliminates the need for a large capital investment on the part of the schools for equipment which becomes obsolete all too quickly.

Schriever, Teague Meet in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP)—A congressional hearing gave a pair of Texas Aggie grads an opportunity to swap tales of their college days.

The get-together took place when Lt. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, head of the Air Force's Research and Development Command, testified before the House Space Committee of which Rep. Olin E. (Tiger) Teague (D-Tex) is a member.

Schriever was graduated from A&M in 1931 and Teague in 1932.

Schriever, a field artillery reservist, entered active duty upon getting his B.S. degree in mechanical engineering. He became a pilot after training at Randolph and Kelly fields in San Antonio. Advances later made him an authority in aeronautical engineering.

Schriever, who calls San Antonio his home, was born Sept. 14, 1910, in Bremen, Germany. He moved with his parents to Texas in 1917 and became a naturalized citizen in 1923. He is married and has three children.

After bomber pilot service with the Army Air Corps in California and the Panama Canal Zone, Schriever left the military in 1937 to become a pilot for Northwest Airlines. He returned to the Air Corps the next year as a second lieutenant with the 7th Bomber Group in Hamilton Field, Calif. A year later he went to Wright Field, Ohio, for test pilot duty, and attended an engineering school there. Schriever then was assigned to take advanced studies at Stanford University and earned a masters in mechanical engineering, specializing in aeronautical matters, in June, 1942.

From July of the next year throughout World War II, Schriever saw duty at bases in the Pacific, and was wounded in action.

Early in the 1950's the Defense Department began to concentrate on missile development, and Schriever began his climb to the top. He is credited more than any other individual with the development of the Atlas, Titan, Thor and Minute Man missiles.

Miss Kasner New Prexy Of Secretaries

Miss Alma Kasner, secretary to Sid Lovelless of the American General Life Insurance Company, was elected President of the Bryan-College Station Chapter of the National Secretaries' Association (International) at the business meeting held at the Triangle Restaurant this week.

Miss Kasner will take office on June 1. Serving with her will be Mrs. Mary Beth Gandy as Vice President, Mrs. Lily Watson as Recording Secretary, Mrs. Ruby Dishman as Corresponding Secretary and Mrs. Patsy Wilson as Treasurer. Installation will be done by officers of the Houston Chapter of NSA, since they chartered the Bryan-College Station Chapter five years ago this May.

The chapter voted to send a delegate and alternate to the Texas-Louisiana Division meeting to be held in Mineral Wells on May 20 through 22. Mrs. Margaret Coleman, president, and Alma Kasner, vice president, will be the delegate and alternate.

Mrs. LaJuan Joyer auctioneered an enthusiastic White Elephant Sale following the regular business meeting.

TURNESA SCORES

WOODMERE, N.Y. (AP)—Jim Turnesa, former PGA champion, won the Metropolitan Open golf crown with a score of 286 for 72 holes. The pro from Elmsford, N.Y., beat out Shelley Mayfield of Meadow Brook at Jericho, N.Y., by one stroke. Mayfield had a chance to tie on the final hole but his attempt to sink a 10-foot putt just missed the cup.
