Inadequate

Texas A&M students have opened their hearts and displayed sympathy and loyalty to fellow students and their friends. This criteria was displayed in the donation to the family of Miss Carole Shirley of San Antonio, who was killed en route to the Senior Ring Dance here this past weekend.

Right at $1,275 was collected in the drive to present to the family of the girl. Her death had put the already stricken family—the father is an invalid—under even more hardship.

The gift was inadequate, to say the least, when measured with a human life. But such was not the aim of the students who contributed to the cause. Theirs was the task of doing what was possible for the parents after the passing of their daughter.

Efforts displayed in the impromptu collection would doubtless equal any on any college or university campus anywhere.

Highest congratulations to the students who participated in the drive. Their help has been a token aid to the misfortune of fellow students.

Again, But...

The possibility of Texas A&M having coeds in the future received its biggest boost ever in the opinion given yesterday by the 10th Court of Civil Appeals.

The court again stopped the admission of women into the all-male college, but declared that a Bryan woman should be allowed to attend Texas A&M if she seeks a course in floriculture leading to a degree. The basis of this opinion came from the fact that Texas A&M is the only state supported school offering a degree in the course she sought.

There may be more to the opinion than meets the eye, however, as the coed issue has been progressing favorably in the direction of their admission during the past year. Despite the arguments that Texas A&M is an all-male college, operated under military rules, the chances of admitting women to the institution are still in a position of going either way. Still the recent decisions of the courts have been somewhat toward the admission of coeds, as evidenced particularly yesterday.

This decision could be another in the slow process of eventually admitting coeds to the 84-year-old all-male college.

It's like being bitten to death by a duck. . . .

Unprecedented

A rash of posters on trees and signs on campus appeared over the past two days, advertising the services of local bookstores. Displays of this type is unprecedented in recent years.

Not only do these posters deface the campus, they are a flagrant display of someone's disregard for the beauty of A&M at a time when visitors are beginning to flock to the campus for the events which mark the closing of school each year.

The owners of these stores must not realize that some of the places they are placing their posters are also memorials, such as the trees around the main drill field.

There should be other more lucrative ways of plying a trade than pasting stickers on the trees on the campus.

Demos Appeal To Party To Break SS Stalemate

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 WASHINGTON — Democratic backers of a Social Security health plan for the aged talked today of an appeal to the party leadership to break a stalemate.

The House Ways and Means Committee Thursday climaxed nearly two months of closed-door sessions with a series of test votes on health legislation. Unable to muster a majority for any of the various proposals, it finally voted 13-12 to have one drafted in detail for study in a week.

There was general agreement this vote did not represent even tentative acceptance of the plan, a state-federal program offered by the committee chairman, Wilbur D. Mills (D-Ark.).

Later, one of the backers of the proposal for a hospitalization and nursing home program tied to Social Security retirement said he expects its proponents to seek a conference with Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.).

Rayburn, without endorsing the specific Social Security plan offered by Rep. Aime J. Forand (D-R.I.), has indicated he favors the principle of health benefits for the aged financed through an increased Social Security tax.

The Forand bill, first of the old age health plans to come to public attention, has inspired strong support by union groups and determined opposition by the American Medical Assn.—which also opposes the proposals made later.

Backers Sure Of Pushing School Construction Aid Bill

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 WASHINGTON—Backers of a school construction aid bill that has been cleared for House action are confident they can push it through.

But opponents have their own ideas about pushing. As Rep. Graham A. Barden (D-N.C.) put it: "The federal government ought to keep its nose out of education and I'm not going to be the one to push it in."

The 975-million-dollar measure edged past the Rules Committee Thursday 7-5 for floor action next Wednesday. It would provide 325 million dollars yearly for each of the next three years—solely for school construction. After the first year, states would have to match federal funds.

The Senate already has passed a greatly different school aid bill. It would authorize $1,800,000,000 in grants over a two-year period, giving states the right to use money for teachers salaries as well as construction.

In the past, the House consistently has refused to grant money for local schools except for school districts with many federal employees. The Eisenhower administration has proposed that instead of making grants, the federal government underwrite state school bonds for five years and pay half the interest and carrying charges. This proposal is expected to be offered as a substitute when the House bill comes to the floor.

Sir Isaac Newton is struck by another great idea!

IT'S WHAT'S UP FRONT THAT COUNTS

As sure as little apples, Newton knew that what goes up must come down.

But when it comes down to a really pleasurable filter cigarette, it's what goes up—in front of the filter, that is—that makes the difference!

And there's where Winston had an inspired idea—Filter-Blend! Winston specially selects choice, mild tobaccos, then specially processes them for filter smoking. The result: Filter-Blend up front of a modern filter. That's what makes Winston a complete filter cigarette.

Filter-Blend also makes Winston America's best-selling, best-tasting filter cigarette. Take it from Sir Isaac:

"You don't have to be hit on the head to know that Winston tastes good like a cigarette should!"

SHARE YOUR WEALTH

We are not socialistic but we do believe you can share your wealth of knowledge with another Aggie by placing your old textbook on the market. (He might draw the same professor you had this semester!)

On second thought, perhaps you should keep that personally annotated copy. It might be worth its weight in gold to you sometime in the future.

On the other hand — if you are not interested in gold — and feel you have to lighten your payload on the long trek home—to MOM'S COOKING—we would welcome the opportunity to bid on the book.

Our offer will be the "FAIR MARKET VALUE" and par for the course.
