

Armed Forces Program To Be One Of Many Observance

Honest John Fires

The US Army Honest John Rocket is fired from White Sands Missile Range. The long range artillery rocket, a weapon for tactical use to provide first support in ground combat operations, is in the hands of troops in the US, Europe and the Far East.

Airlifted

US Army troops, fighting a simulated aggressor force, are airlifted into a drop zone by U. S. Air Force Tactical Air Command C-123 "Provides," which shuttled in one minute apart on the dirt strip to deliver troops, combat vehicles, equipment and supplies for the fighting men.

Tomorrow's observance of Armed Forces Day in Bryan will be only one of many such observances throughout the world as all freedom-loving people pause to pay tribute to the many new advances made in military weapons and equipment.

The local program is included in Area 2 of the nation's over-all plan for the observance.

During the 11 years Armed Forces Day has been observed, the world has seen tremendous advances in almost every phase of military equipment. The most notable advance has been in the missile field, which has mushroomed tremendously in the last four or five years.

New Missiles

Included among the Army's new missiles are the Nike and Honest John, while the Navy has produced the Polaris and the Air Force has produced the Atlas.

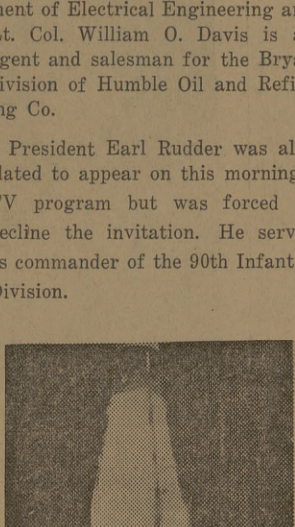

Tremendous advances have also been made in practically every type of aircraft, submarines and various types of transport equipment. Among these are the Hound Dog, X-15 rocket ship, Crusader Jet, the Marlin Amphibious plane, the "Mighty Mite," Infantry Weapons Carriers, helicopters and various types of Task Groups and Forces.

Life of Dignitaries

Another interesting aspect of tomorrow's ceremonies is the life many of the dignitaries lead in civilian life.

Col. Joe E. Davis and Lt. Col. Taylor Wilkins, for example, are both Commandants in military schools. Col. Davis is Commandant here and Lt. Col. Wilkins serves at Allen Academy in Bryan.

Col. Kay Haswell is an insurance agent in Bryan, Brig. Gen. Spencer Buchanan is a member of the Department of Civil Engineering, Lt. Col. O. D. Butler is the head of the Department of Animal Husbandry, Comdr. Norman F. Rode is a member of the Department of Electrical Engineering and Lt. Col. William O. Davis is an agent and salesman for the Bryan division of Humble Oil and Refining Co.

Atlas Ready

The Air Force intercontinental ballistic missile Atlas is ready for launching at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Crew Scrambles

A US Coast Guard crew scrambles for a Marlin amphib plane called out on a rescue mission.

Anti-Sub Exercises

A US Navy Task Force Group conducts anti-submarine warfare training exercises. The Task Group's Flagship, the USS Valley Forge, is surrounded by the group's destroyers and submarines while anti-submarine helicopters search and patrol aircraft flight overhead.

Workhorse

The "Mighty Mite," the workhorse of the Marines, is given a lift by the Marine Corps helicopter, the HUS-1.

Troops Debark

Troops of a US Army Task Force debark from helicopter during Army infantry troop tests.

WHAT'S A BOOK?

Do You — as a student — know the definition of a book?

Here's how G. & C. Merriam Company of Springfield, Mass. defines a book in the latest edition of the world's most popular Webster's NEW COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY.

book (bʊk), n. [AS bōc; akin to Goth. bōka a letter, in pl. book, writings, and to AS. bōc, bēc, becc, because the Saxons and Germans in general wrote runes on pieces of birch bark.] 1. A written or printed narrative or record, or series of them; esp., a literary composition. 2. A set of sheets, as of wood, ivory, or paper, strung or bound together, as a loose-leaf notebook. 3. A major division of a treatise or literary work; as, six books of the Aeneid. 4. (esp.) The Bible; also [not esp.], one of its subdivisions. 5. Anything that may be studied like a book; as, the book of nature. 6. A libretto; hence, the text of a play. 7. A packet, as of stamps or gold leaf. 8. A record of bets, esp. of bets on horse races. 9. Card playing. A certain number of tricks or of cards forming a set, won or held by one side.
