Oceanography - Meteorology Course Slated In Galveston

A short course in Oceanography and Meteorology will be held at A&M's Galveston Marine Laboratories June 6-7-8. The course is under the sponsorship of the National Science Foundation.

The purpose of the course will be to provide school teachers with the necessary background and information for classroom talks on the sciences of the atmosphere and the sea and the ways in which the two are interrelated.

The subject matter will cover the studies of the atmosphere with emphasis on weather factors; of physical, chemical and geological oceanography and of marine biology with special reference to inshore animals which are more easily available for subsequent classroom demonstrations.

The course is open to men and women teachers of scientific subjects in both junior and senior high schools and in junior colleges and also to school science supervisors.

The course will convene at the Galveston Marine Laboratory, Ft. Crockett, Galveston, during the afternoon of June 5 and disperse on the evening of July 2.

The average day will comprise two or three lectures with the remainder of the time being occupied with supervised laboratory work, field studies, reading assignments and discussion groups. A trip on the ocean going research ship, "Hidalgo" and a visit to the Department of Oceanography and Meteorology at A&M will be arranged.

In addition to instruction by members of the faculty, lectures will be given by visiting scientists.

The devotional will be given by the Rev. A. T. Dyal, pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Bay City.

Dr. Frank W. R. Hubert, dean of the College's School of Arts and Sciences, will give the welcome address.

The principal address will be delivered by Forrest E. Conner, superintendent of the St. Paul, Minn., public schools. He is president of the American Assn. of School Administrators.

Group meetings will then be held throughout the sessions of the Texas Assn. of County Superintendents, Texas School Administrators and Texas Assn. for Instructional Supervisors.

Dr. Grady P. Parker, head of the Department of Education and Psychology, is secretary to the conferences and general chairman.

Rabid Animals Reported In Area

There have been recent reports of rabid wild animals in the Bryan, College Station area, chiefly among skunks and foxes, according to Edwin H. Cooper, extension wildlife specialist.

Since complete eradication of animals subject to carrying rabies is almost impossible, local residents should be aware of methods which lessen the possibility of contracting the disease, said Cooper.

Contrary to popular belief, rabid animals do not have "running fits" nor "froth at the mouth," he said. A rabid animal is usually characterized by symptoms of paralysis and loss of the usual fear of humans or natural enemies. Children should be cautioned to avoid any wild or domestic animals, including dogs, which appear to be sick or acting strangely, said Cooper.
