Ag Dean Extends Welcome to Fish

To Agriculture Freshmen: It is a real pleasure to extend a sincere welcome to you as you embark upon a career in Agriculture. We are particularly pleased that you have chosen Agriculture as your major and we are confident you will find your efforts both pleasant and profitable.

You understand, of course, that we cannot promise effortless success in your studies, but we can promise you friendly and sympathetic council as you face your problems. Each of the staff members in Agriculture is eager to make available to you the greatest opportunities possible for a sound education in this important science.

As you face the challenge of college life we encourage you to seek assistance and advice from your instructors, faculty advisers and the Director of Agricultural Instruction. They are here to help you and they feel a great pride in the success of their students.

As you become acquainted with the faculty and staff, we believe that you too, will be proud of them. They are among the very best in the nation. Many are world authorities in their chosen fields. They have dedicated themselves to the search for truth through research and the teaching of these truths through their contact with you in the classroom and on the campus. They also maintain close contact with the citizens of the state through their agricultural extension programs.

The staff will be glad to have you see and work with the excellent research and educational facilities that are available at the college.

Agriculture has undergone dramatic changes in recent years. It has become highly technical in much the same manner as have medical, nuclear and space sciences. It is essential therefore, that you obtain solid training in the basic sciences, such as chemistry, physics, math and biology. You may not find any of these easy but you will find the results of diligence and perseverance most rewarding.

You have every reason to be proud that you selected Agriculture as your major. Agriculture is basic to the economic welfare of Texas and the nation. Never in the history of this country has the need for outstanding leadership in Agriculture been greater than it is today. No other industry can offer more rewarding opportunities for those who prepare themselves to meet its challenges.

The opportunities in Agriculture are becoming much more varied as science and technology are being employed for more efficient production of food and fiber. Increasingly attractive job opportunities are open to college graduates trained in Agricultural business and management and public relations.

Industries that supply farmers and ranchmen with machinery, chemicals, fertilizer, and many other items have job openings for those who have sound training in specialized fields of Agriculture. The actual production of agricultural products through the utilization of our soil and water demands college graduates who have a working knowledge of basic and applied sciences as well as of business, economics and management. The processing, distribution and marketing of agricultural products constitute a third great area offering attractive opportunities for graduates well trained in the agricultural sciences.

We wish you full success in the years ahead. The staff of A&M pledges its support, both in the classroom as well as outside, to make your stay here as productive as possible. We shall look forward to becoming acquainted with you, personally.

Local Scouts Set Historical Trek

Days of the old frontier will come vividly alive for some 30-odd Explorer Scouts of the Arrowmont District when they undertake a 7-day trek to historical sites in the surrounding area.

The historical trek, to begin Sunday, will be under the leadership of Ralph McCormick, district chairman of camping and activities.

"We're making this trek because history becomes more meaningful to one if he has the opportunity to visit the actual sites and to relive to a certain extent the events which took place there," McCormick said.

"Texas has a fascinating history," he said. "Six flags have flown over our state: Spain, France, Mexico, Republic of Texas, Southern Confederacy and the United States. Much of our rich heritage was born within 25 miles of Bryan and College Station," he added.

By making the trek, McCormick pointed out, Explorers, in addition to having history come alive before their eyes, will have the opportunity to earn additional awards in the areas of camping, exploring, etc.

Trekkers will assemble Sunday at the Carson Pryor Ranch three miles west of Wheelock at 2 p.m. There the Explorers will trek to Dunn's Fort where they will undertake a service project of cleaning up the Dunn Cemetery and erecting a historical marker at the fort's site. The marker is being paid for by descendants of the Dunn family.

Monday the Explorers will travel by horseback from the fort via the Old San Antonio Road to its original crossing at the Brazos River, a point four miles south of the Highway 21 bridge.

On Tuesday, the group will float down the Brazos on rafts which Utah calls itself both the "Beehive State" (honey is one of its major products), and the "Mormon State."

are to be constructed from abandoned railway crossies, camping that night at the end of the Leonard Road. They will continue Wednesday by raft down the river to the Koope bridge where Wednesday night camp will be made.

The rafts will be discarded at the Koope bridge in favor of an overland hike with packs to Independence. Here the group will complete service projects at the graves of Margaret Lea Houston, wife of Sam Houston, and her mother, Nancy Lea. The group will camp that night at the Seward Plantation.

Saturday the group will travel by ox cart and covered wagon from Independence to Washington-on-the-Brazos. There the group will be met by parents and friends. A reunion Pot Luck Supper, arranged by parents, and a closing ceremony will end the trek.

Each evening special programs have been arranged; however, they will remain unannounced for fear of dulling their authenticity. Parents and friends of scouting are welcome to attend each of the night programs, said McCormick.

Watkins Gives Welcome to '64

To Agriculture Freshmen:

It is my sincere pleasure to welcome you here to begin your college studies to prepare for a career in the Agricultural Industry.

Since the end of World War II the changes that have occurred in all aspects of the complex industry which is Agriculture have been so broad, so basic and so numerous as to constitute a revolution.

Labor has gone a long way toward pricing itself out of most of its traditional employment in the production of crops and livestock. Such labor as remains is doing less and less by hand and more and more by machinery and technical process.

Costs of operation are increasing in all facets of production, processing, distribution and marketing, so that margins are diminishing and only large, efficient units can survive. Science, technology and business principles must be applied as rapidly as possible throughout the industry.

The problem is sometimes distorted by political considerations and made to appear as a problem for farmers and ranchers only, and these people often have been made to seem parasites on the American economy.

Best wishes for success in the work that lies ahead. This office and your faculty advisers in the School of Agriculture will try very hard to help you bridge the gap smoothly between high school at home and college away from home.
