'Unified Approach'

Gov. Price Daniel put it this way in an official memorandum:

GREETINGS:

"The United Community Campaigns, frequently called the United Fund or Community Chest Drive, deserve the support of everyone.

"Many worthy activities benefit from this unified approach, and the contributor has the added satisfaction of knowing that whatever he or she gives will be used for the greatest possible good.

"These coordinated efforts to raise operating funds for local and national health, welfare and character building agencies make fun-raising more efficient and equitable.

"THEREFORE, I as governor of Texas, do hereby designate the months of September, October and November, 1960 as in Texas, and urge all the people of our state to participate generously in the campaigns which are carried on in their local communities.

UNITED COMMUNITY CAMPAIGNS MONTH

"In official recognition thereof, I hereby affix my signature to this.

Price Daniel,
Governor of Texas."

In the College Station area, the United Chest drive will be conducted the first two weeks in November.

The local area surpassed their goal of $13,150 last year and, as a result, have boosted the 1960-61 goal by $2,000 to $15,150. The boost is a vote of confidence and expectancy in the citizens of College Station and the students of Texas A&M to support this portion of the state-wide movement.

Dr. Dale Lepper, United Chest chairman, announced the increase in the goal and disclosed that two new benefactors have been added to the list: the Bryan Boy's Club, Inc. and the Bryan Committee on Alcoholism.

The local chest drive indeed deserves the support of all. As Gov. Price Daniel stated:

"... whatever he or she gives will be used for the greatest possible good."

CADET SLOUCH

by Jim Earle INTERPRETING

"... he'll be okay in a minute! He's just not used to gettin' mail an'—BANG—today he got two letters!"

— Sound Off —

Editor,
The Battalion:
In Thursday's Battalion you printed a letter from Bob Bower complaining about civilian students.

Well, I am in the Corps and just about as avid as they come, but I'll have to argue with Bower. I've found that 90 per cent of the civilians will speak if spoken to. After all, there is no reason for them to speak first. If people in the Corps would speak to them as if they meant it, I'm sure they would speak back.

They speak to me. When it comes to speaking, there are lots of people in the Corps who could do better.

As far as Silver Taps goes, it means a lot to me and to all Texas A&M students and I'm not going to worry about the few who don't attend. If they are not Aggies and don't want to be, that's their business as long as they don't interfere in Texas A&M business.

If we would worry more about being good students ourselves, and speaking and meeting better, and building a good Corps, Texas A&M would be a lot better off.

John Wilkinson '61

civilian students around the campus are not true Aggies:
True, it isn't much of an Aggie that would miss a Silver Tap or the Muster.

However, it still remains a fact that the students in the Corps do not try too hard to get along with their (even though they don't think of them as such) fellow Aggies. Just because a person does not wear a uniform, it does not mean that he is not a true Aggie in every sense of the word.

Several of the civilian students went to the Yell Practice last week and there were very few seniors in the Corps that were there. How many of the other classes in the Corps would have gone to Yell Practice or the other Texas A&M functions if they did not have to?

For harmony, it takes both sides working together to get anything done. Therefore, I suggest that the Corps boys try to get along with their fellow Aggies.

Martin L. Bowers '62

do not think so. I think he was an overgrown baby.

Behave like a man wherever you go and that will let everybody know who you are.

Go ahead, Mr. Pace, pat yourself on your shoulder like the Class of '63 who could not wait for anybody to praise their "outstandingness."

From a psychological viewpoint this is all right because one has to think he is good to be good, but from any other viewpoint, this is not good.

People start thinking you are conceited, snobbish, and many other adjectives.

Khrushchev Wouldn't Threaten Anybody; Oh, No

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

When Nikita Khrushchev says "there is nothing that we desire to seize in other countries" you have to read it against the background of his belief that, by the terms of history itself, all countries fundamentally belong to communism anyway.

When he says "We shall never start a war," you have to read it "except a justified war," for that concept is implicit in Communist doctrine, in his rocket threats, and has never been abrogated by his talk of coexistence. Within the concept, war is justified against anything which interferes with Communist progress toward world subjugation—provided it is expedient.

When Khrushchev says with regard to Berlin "We do not mean to advance any threats of any kind," he means "provided the West agrees to get out." Otherwise, he has said repeatedly, he will abrogate the four-power agreement, and end the occupational rights of the West through East German action. If the West resisted East German ouster and a war resulted, that would be the West's fault, according to his queer way of thinking. He's just trying to persuade the West that its honorable commitments and its fundamental interests in Germany mean nothing. He wouldn't threaten anybody. Oh, no.

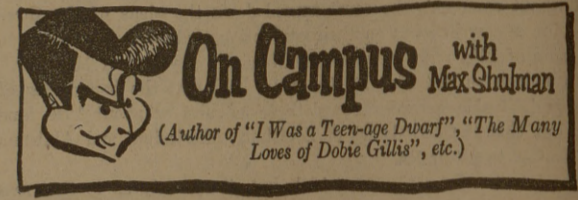

Khrushchev's major objective Sunday night in his broadcast interview seems to have been to convince the world that it should look not at what he is doing, but at what he says he is doing.

Khrushchev apparently realized by that time that his great gamble for the control of the United Nations had failed dismally, and that his boorishness and his threats, in Paris in May and again at the United Nations, had brought him nothing but condemnation. He was out to spread the butter of conciliation. Sometimes he controlled what seemed to be brewing tantrums.

But his statement that "We shall never start a war" came after he had made several of the threats he said he wouldn't make. He said he didn't want to take anything from anybody, but also said "We will win, we will win." And he wasn't talking about a medal for being good.

"HOME SWEET HOMECOMING"

A great number of people have been asking me lately, "What is Homecoming?" but I have been so busy trying to find out why my new sports car leaks that I haven't had time to answer. I am now pleased to report that I finally discovered why my sports car leaks—I have been driving it upside down—and so I am ready today to turn my attention to Homecoming.

Let's begin with definitions. Homecoming is a weekend when old grads return to their alma maters to watch a football game, visit old classrooms and dormitories and inspect each other's bald spots.

The weekend is marked by the singing of old songs, the slapping of old backs and the frequent exchange of such greetings as "Harry, you old polecat!" or "Harry, you old porcupine!" or "Harry, you old rooster!" or "Harry, you old wombat!" As you can see, all old grads are named Harry.

It is not just old grads who behave with such liveliness during Homecoming; the faculty also comports itself with unaccustomed animation. Teachers laugh and smile and pound backs and keep shouting "Harry, you old Airedale!" This unscholarly behavior is carried on in the hope that old grads, in a transport of bonhomie will endow a new geology building.

The old grads, however, are seldom seduced. By game time on Saturday their backs are so sore, their eyeballs so eroded, their extremities so frayed, that it is impossible to get a kind word out of them, much less a new geology building.

Even the football game does not improve their tempers. "Humph!" they snort as the home team completes a 101-yard march to a touchdown. "Do you call that football? Why, back in my day, they'd have been over on the first down! By George, football was football in those days—not this namby-pamby girls' game that passes for football today! Take a look at that bench—50 substitutes sitting there. Why, in my day, there were 11 men on a team and that was it. When you broke a leg, they slapped a piece of tape on it and you went right back in. Why, I remember the big game against State. Harry Signofoos, our star quarterback, was killed in the third quarter. I mean, he was pronounced dead. But did that stop old Harry? Not on your tinfoil! Back in his day they never had a winning drop kick in the last four seconds of play, dead as he was. Back in my day, they played football, by George!"

Everything, say the old grads, was better back in their day—everything except one. Even the most unreconstructed of the old grads has to admit that back in his day they never had a smoke like Marlboro—never a cigarette with such a lot to like—never a filter so easy drawing, a flavor so mild yet hearty, so abundant, so bountiful—never a choice of flip-top box or soft pack.

So old grads, young grads, and undergrads, why don't you settle back and have a full-flavored smoke? Try Marlboro, the filtered cigarette with the unfiltered taste, and Homecoming will be a happy occasion and the sun will shine and the air will be filled with the murmur of wings and no man's hand will be raised against you.

At Homecoming time—or any time—try Marlboro's unfiltered companion cigarette—mild, flavorful Philip Morris... Regular size or king size Commander—a brand new and happy experience in smoking! Have a Commander—welcome aboard!
