Broussard Breaks Free Toss Record

After the final buzzer sounded; all the fouls were called; the supply of drink cups extinguished; and usual rowdy crowd of Longhorns cleared—A&M came out on the bottom end at Texas Gregory Gym last night by a score of 81-76.

During the first half of play, not more than three points separated A&M and Texas as the lead changed hands nine times was tied 10 times. The halftime score was 38-37 in favor of the Aggies but the percentages didn't speak too well for any team as A&M hit for 37 per cent while Texas has a 36.8 percentage.

Early in the second half Texas' Butch Skeete and Al Almanza shot the Longhorns into a lead that was never overtaken by the Cadets, although they came within one point with 3:20 left as Don Stanley's jump shot made the score 69-68. However, this closeness was short-lived as Texas quickly widened their margin to three points and were upward from there to end the game a five point winner.

Again the Aggies' brightest spot was Carroll Broussard who netted 37 points for the second time in the last week. Besides tying his old record set against Arkansas, Broussard tore down the A&M record for free throws. The old record of 16 was held by James Addison, but in last night's game Broussard tallied 19-22 from the free throw line.

Texas' high man was Almanza who netted 23 points followed by Jimmy Gilbert with 16. Both Texas high scorers made 11 free throws and Almanza was the top rebounder for both teams with 10.

Jerry Windham was A&M's big man off the boards as he dragged down rebounds as Broussard, Wayne Annett and Lewis Qualls had six each.

Fouls marred the performance of both teams last night as a total of 61 fouls were called. There were 33 against Texas and 28 against A&M, but the Aggies suffered the greatest loss. The only man on A&M's starting lineup who didn't foul out was Broussard and he played a major part of the game with four miscues against him.

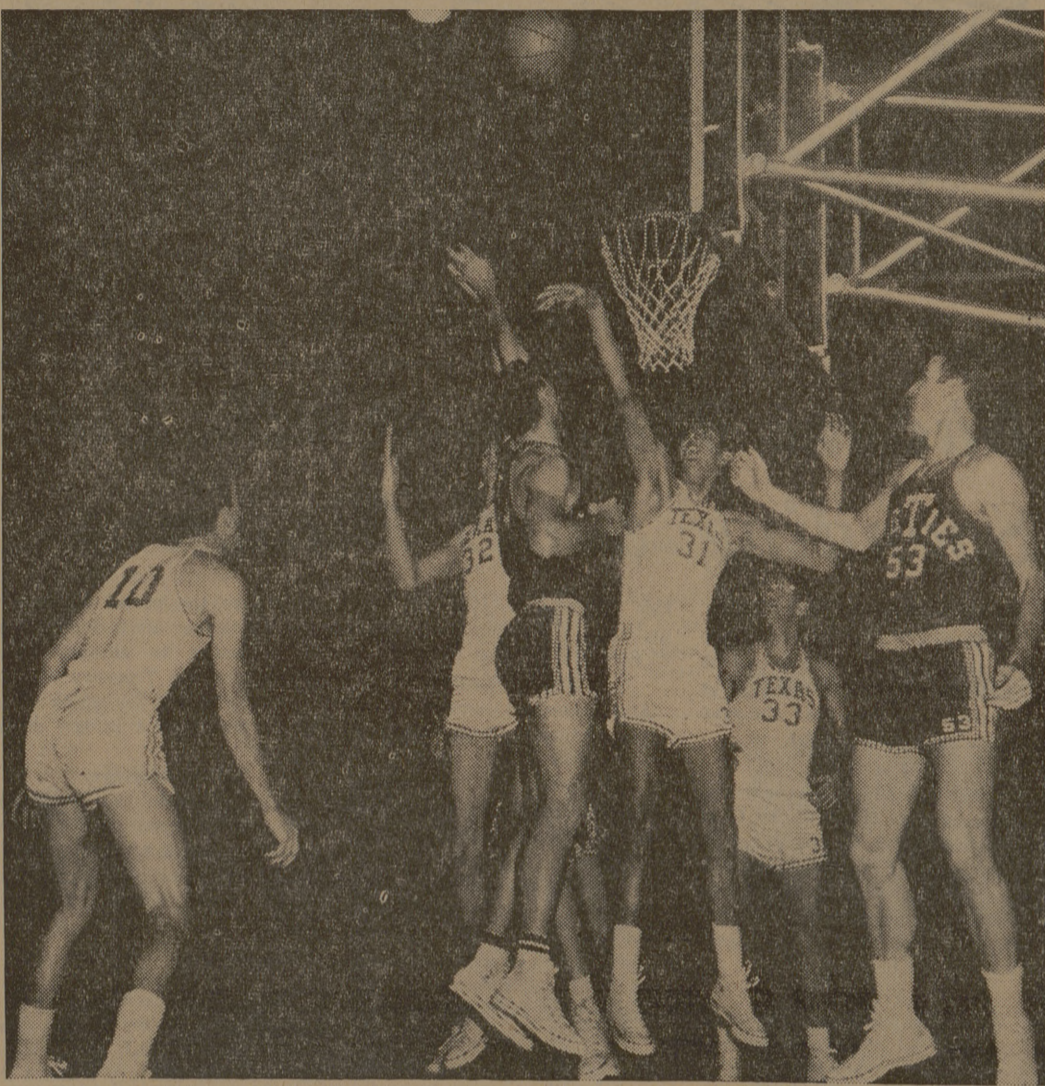

Last night's win left the Longhorns in the Southwest Conference lead with a 4-1 record while A&M is riding in third place tie.

No more conference action is slated for the Aggies until after semester exams, but Thursday night A&M meets Houston in Houston and Jan. 30-31, the Cadets host the College of the Pacific.

All remaining rooms will be available on first come, first serve basis beginning at 8 a.m. Monday. Military students who are moving to civilian dorms at this time will need only the signatures of the commanding officer and tactical officer in addition to the "Clearance for dropping ROTC" form.

All students who move from the cadet areas to civilian areas or vice versa, are reminded that they must turn in their mattress covers to the place where they were drawn and draw new ones from the issuing agency for their new area.

Day students, including those living in College Apartments, are strongly urged to secure Day Student Permits and pay their fees early in order to save time for all concerned. Any one who expects to be a day student during the Spring semester must secure a Day Student Permit from the Housing Office before paying their fees. This includes all students who are day students at the present time.

ELI L. WHITELEY FETED Medal Of Honor Winner Attending Inauguration

Eli L. Whiteley, one of A&M's two living Congressional Medal of Honor winners, is attending the inauguration of President-Elect John F. Kennedy in Washington, Friday. Whiteley is a professor in the Department of Agronomy.

Whiteley was accompanied to Washington by his family and will occupy a seat of honor alongside the president-elect during the ceremonies. He will be a guest of the inaugural committee.

A graduate of A&M, Whiteley, Class of '41, was a first lieutenant in the Army during World War II. He is vice president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society.

To illustrate the type of action for which the awards were made, Whiteley's Congressional Medal of Honor citation is quoted:

"1st Lt. Eli L. Whiteley, 15th Infantry Regiment, for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life above and beyond the call of duty.

"Lt. Whiteley, while leading his platoon on Dec. 27, 1944, in savage house-to-house fighting through the fortress town of Sigolsheim, France, attacked a building through a street swept by withering mortar and automatic weapons fire.

"He was hit and severely wounded in the arm and shoulder, but he charged into the house alone and killed its two defenders. Hurling smoke and fragmentation grenades before him, he rushed to the next house and stormed inside, killing 2 and capturing 11 of the enemy.

"He continued leading the platoon in the extremely dangerous task of clearing hostile troops from strong points along the street until he reached a building held by fanatical Nazi troops. Although suffering from painful wounds which had rendered his left arm useless, he advanced on this strongly defended house and, after blasting out a wall with bazooka fire, charged through a hail of bullets. Wedging his sub-machine gun under his uninjured arm, he rushed into the house through the hole torn by his rockets, killed 5 of the enemy, and forced the remaining 12 to surrender.

"As he emerged to continue his fearless attack, he was again hit and critically wounded. In agony and with one eye pierced by a shell fragment, he shouted for his call of duty.

men to follow him to the next house. He was determined to stay in the fighting and did remain at the head of his platoon until forcibly evacuated.

"By his disregard for personal safety, aggressiveness while suffering from severe wounds, determined leadership, and superb courage, Lt. Whiteley killed nine Germans, captured 23 more, and spearheaded an attack which cracked the core of the enemy resistance in a vital area."

A&M produced six Congressional Medal of Honor winners during World War II. Two of the heroes are living and four awards were made posthumously.

NSF Grant Extended By $15,000

The National Science Foundation has awarded a $15,000 extension of a research grant to the Department of Chemistry to continue support of fundamental amnosugar research being carried out by Dr. H. K. Zimmerman. The grant will continue to be administered through the A&M Research Foundation.

"The research which these funds will support is primarily concerned with the synthesis of new amnosugars of which a great many occur naturally as constituents of specialized tissues in the body, antibiotics and bacteria," Zimmerman says.

Zimmerman said that recent work on this project has led to the verification of the chemical structure of Neosamine-C, a newly discovered amnosugar which is a constituent of the antibiotic Neomycin-C.

This natural amnosugar was first found by a research group at the University of Illinois, "but they were unable to determine its complete structure," said Zimmerman.
