

Ags Face 'Must Win' Against Tech Tonight

THE BATTALION

Win Will Still Leave Cadets 2nd

By JOE CALLICOATTE

Texas Tech makes the scene in G. Rollie White tonight to meet the Cadets Cagers in a game that will make no immediate changes in the Southwest Conference basketball lead, no matter how the game turns out.

Last week A&M still had bright hopes for at least a tie for the championship while Tech continued to roll by defeating Southern Methodist, 88-67.

Still a 'Chance'

Even if the Aggies top Tech tonight, Tech must lose another game before the title will be shared. Also A&M can't afford any more losses. Texas and Arkansas are sitting right beside the Cadets in the SWC with 5-3 records.

Neither TCU nor A&M was particularly accurate from the field Saturday night as the Frogs hit a shade over 40 per cent while A&M had 35 per cent. It was almost the same case at Lubbock in the SMU-Tech clash, with Tech making a respectable mark of 45 per cent compared to the Ponies', 37.

The big difference in the A&M-TCU game was in rebounding. The Froggies grabbed 54 off the boards while the Aggies netted 45.

Two Top Scorers

Whether hot or cold, two top scorers will pair off tonight in the persons of Carroll Broussard and Del Ray Mounts. Broussard still holds down the conference lead with a 24.1 average and Mounts is in third place with an 18.3 average.

The Aggie Fish are idle tonight, but will go to Tyler tomorrow night for a rematch with the Tyler Junior College Apaches. In Ft. Worth the Frosh topped the TCU Wogs for the second time this season, 67-49. Bennie Lenox led the team to its seventh win of the season by tossing in 21 points, four points below his average.

Lynn Merritt was next high for the Fish with 16 points.

Aggie Exes In Abilene Join Movement

A&M alumni living in Abilene will be among the representatives of 14 Texas colleges and universities teaming up in Abilene this spring to conduct a massive fundraising drive among their combined 6,250 ex-students living in the city.

A volunteer organization of Abilene alumni of the 14 cooperating schools is being formed under the banner of Texas CLASP, which stands for College Loyalty Alumni Support Program.

Abilene's three colleges—McMurry, Abilene Christian and Hardin-Simmons—will serve as co-hosts of the project, an adaptation of one pioneered last year in Connecticut where 35 colleges simultaneously solicited their alumni in one huge promotional effort. The program is aimed at achieving a high degree of civic interest through a combined, aggressive, community-wide alumni fund promotion.

Participating in the Texas project are the three Abilene schools, Baylor University, Rice University, the University of Houston, Southern Methodist University, Southwestern University, A&M, Texas Christian University, Texas Tech, University of Texas, Texas Wesleyan College and Trinity University.

Objectives of the simultaneous personal solicitation campaign in one city are: 1. To dramatize the need of alumni support to alumni and the public; 2. To stimulate a healthy spirit of competition among the ex-students of the various schools; 3. To thereby provide a favorable climate for increasing the number of alumni donors and dollars for each of the institutions; and 4. To set an example which participating colleges might want to duplicate in other Texas cities in the future.

The plan is reportedly simple. Each school will independently organize a sufficient number of its own ex-students living in Abilene and ask them to solicit their fellow alumni during an intensive two-week campaign May 2-15. There will be no pooling of funds. Each college collects only for its own aims and through its own organization.

Presidents of the participating colleges will be special guests at the kick-off dinner in Abilene the evening of May 1. A nationally known educational leader will be invited to address the gathering of presidents, volunteer alumni solicitors and alumni staff directors of the 14 schools.

'Prayer Day' Slated Friday

The College and System offices housed in campus will join with the College Station Council of Church Women in recognizing Friday as "World Day of Prayer," President Earl Rudder has announced.

"It is requested that we halt our activities for one minute of silent prayer as we unite with the people throughout this country and around the world in observing World Day of Prayer," Rudder said.

To signal this occasion and also as a reminder, the College whistle will blow at 10 a.m. and again at one minute past 10 o'clock.

ORGANIZATIONAL MEET

Spring SCUBA Session Begins Work Tomorrow

By GERRY BROWN

The Short Course Department of A&M along with the supervision of the Department of Oceanography and Meteorology will present its second semester short course in the theory and operation of the Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus commonly known as SCUBA beginning tomorrow.

This course will be basically the same as previous courses except that in its new form it will be more difficult than earlier courses.

The ten week course consisting of four lectures and six "pool sessions" is designed to interest people in SCUBA diving and introduce them to the safety methods needed for safe diving. These methods include how to ditch and retrieve the aqua lung under water, the buddy breathing system and the general use of the lung. The course is open to all persons connected with the college who can fulfill the entrance requirements. These new requirements include a 1,200 foot pool swim within 15 minutes, swimming across the pool underwater, demonstrating the ability to use mask, fins and snorkel and the passing of a test concerning the recovery of a ten pound weight from the bottom of the pool.

The course will cost $10 for college applicants and $20 for non-college applicants. These applicants must be at least 16 years old and furnish their own face masks, fins and snorkel.

However, these articles may be purchased through the Short Course. All other equipment, such as regulators, tanks, weight belts, and air, will be furnished.

The organizational meeting is scheduled tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Room 306 of the Oceanography and Meteorology Building. The course is limited to only thirty persons instead of the previous 50 in order that each student receive more individual attention.

Upon completion of the course along with the passing of a pool test and written test, students will receive a proficiency certificate. Those persons who for some reason are unable to finish this semester's course in the allotted time may pick it up in the fall semester.

Anyone having further questions concerning the course may contact Jack Hill, Project 24, of the Department of Oceanography and Meteorology.

'Fourposter' Opens Tonight For Comedy Look At Love

Marital mirth through 25 years of living together will be seen in the opening production of "The Fourposter," starting tonight at eight in the Lower Level of the Memorial Student Center.

"The Fourposter" is an enjoyable comedy concerning the trials and tribulations of married life, starring Harry Gooding as Michael and Reggie Lundergan in the role of his spouse, Agnes, directed by C. K. Esten.

The show opens with a scene between the anxious, enraptured husband and his timid, blushing bride on their wedding night, with a comedy of errors pursuing throughout the scene. This is followed by the second part of Act One, concerned with incidents occurring three years later during the amusing period of pregnancy. Second Act of the three-act play comprises eight more years of married life, with trials and tribulations continuing to flow, making the show more intriguing through each scene.

The marriage of the daughter of the couple is the basis for the scene opening Act Three, followed by the closing scene as they prepare to move out of their apartment and give a young, newly married couple an opportunity to endure the same experiences they have been through.

Set for "The Fourposter" includes a stage which will be surrounded on three sides by the audience, the show being played "in the round." The actors will face the problem of being in the audience's view from three directions, necessitating the use of certain stage techniques which they have been through.

Bull Session Circa 1943 ... Aggie Flick Comes To Guion

Guion Hall Plans Showing Of Film Based On A&M

By TOMMY HOLBEIN

Talk about an "Old Army Flick" in Guion Hall! This weekend, the theater has precisely that scheduled—a movie filmed on the A&M campus about an Aggie.

"We've Never Been Licked" was made in 1943 by Universal-International, and is a full-length movie about an Aggie who is drawn into the throes of war while studying agriculture at A&M.

The film stars Noah Berry, Jr., Robert Mitchum, and other noted celebrities, narrated by Bill Stern, and was produced by Walter Wanger, whose recent successes have included "The Glenn Miller Story" and others.

This is the only copy of the film that it has seldom been in use, and destroyed or worn out after years of use. The film was discovered by Joe Easley, chairman of the film society, during remodeling of the projection booth in Guion Hall about three weeks ago.

"Remarkably enough, the film is in excellent condition, and all scenes are very clear," said Easley.

He attributed this to the fact that it has seldom been in use, and this weekend will be one of the first times this particular copy of the picture will have been shown.

In the latter part of the show, the scene shifts from A&M to war in the Pacific, with the last group of aerial battle scenes being actual war films shot off Okinawa and other South Pacific islands.

"We've Never Been Licked" was filmed in the days of campaign hats, mounted cavalry, artillery ranges and Army Air Corps fighter pilot training at A&M.

Included in the show are excellent scenes of meals in Sbis Dining Hall, dorm life, pass-bys, inspections, and yell practices woven around a plot of suspense and drama.

In viewing the film, today's Aggies can see the differences and similarities of life at A&M 20 years ago; it will be noticed, from the opening scene in Kyle Field, that many of the traditions we still maintain today were observed loyally then.

"We've Never Been Licked" will be shown Friday, Saturday and Sunday; Friday, it will be shown along with "Elmer Gantry;" Saturday, with "The Fugitive Kind," and Sunday with "High Time."
