Petroleum Course Plans Announced

Registrants at the fourth Advanced Petroleum Reservoir Engineering Course to be held April 17-28 will learn the latest methods of evaluating performance of petroleum reservoirs. This information may be used as a basis of selecting field operating procedures to achieve optimum recovery.

R. L. Whiting, Professor and Head of the Department of Petroleum Engineering, said the two-week-long session includes 17 hours of lecture on rock properties, fluid properties and basic reservoir mechanics. Sixteen hours of lecture and computations will cover well performance and 50 hours of lecture and computation will be devoted to reservoir performance.

He said the current offering is an outgrowth of summer courses offered in 1956 and 1957. It was first offered in the present form in the fall of 1959. Since 1956, 160 engineers have returned from industry to attend the course.

The course starts at 8 a.m. the first day in the Industry Course room of the recently completed W. T. Doherty Petroleum Engineering Building, Whiting said.

The instructor said students in attendance will include representatives of 14 major and independent oil companies. One of the registrants is from India, one from Indonesia, two from Venezuela, one from Brazil, two from Louisiana, two from Colorado, one from Wyoming and nine from Texas.

Companies represented are the American Overseas Petroleum Limited, New York; Assam Oil Company Limited, India; The British American Oil Producing Company and Delhi-Taylor Oil Corporation, Dallas; Champlin Oil and Refining Company, Fort Worth; Honolulu Oil Corporation, Midland; Lion Oil Company and The Ohio Oil Company, Shreveport, La.; Petrobras, Brazil; Richmond Exploration Company and Venezuelan Sun Oil Company, Maracaibo, Venezuela; Tennessee Gas Transmission Company, Texas Gas Transmission Corporation and Union Texas Natural Gas Corporation, all of Houston.
