Heat Beat? Try These Coolers

By The Associated Press
If the fish aren't biting and the installments are overdue and the heat is blistering, see if these oddities will take your mind off your troubles.

A highly efficient burglar broke into the Delta Sales Co. in San Benito. He used the company's own blow torch to open the vault. Harry Diehl, running for senator in the April 4 election, hired a 4,200-seat Houston hall to make a speech. No one showed up except five stagehands assigned there to work. Diehl addressed the stagehands, but how they voted is locked up in the secrecy of the ballot box. Some women in Alice are religiously dieting. Women of the First Baptist Church formed a club with one objective: To lose weight.

At San Antonio, which must be a barrel of laughs from the number of oddball things that happen there, the school system went to court to gain possession of four confiscated pinball machines. They want to use the parts to teach physics. Animals are always messing up scientific research. Arch Hancock, a Jewett veterinarian, finally operated on a mysteriously sick cow. He found she had eaten a plastic balloon sent up by the Weather Bureau to gather scientific data. One scientific fact was discovered, however: Cows don't digest plastic very well.

In Stephenville, a court petition filed by Homer Wolfe asked $50,000 damages. It described Eddie Jones as "a reckless and incompetent tricycle operator." Eddie is 3 years old. He hit Wolfe's wife, a servant in the Jones home.

Frank G. Suarez isn't exactly helpless despite his wooden arm. A man kicked in the door of the Suarez' cafe, then ran. Suarez pursued him, and flailed him with the wooden arm until he cried for mercy and the pleasure of being arrested by the cops. It happened in San Antonio, naturally.

A DC8 which normally cruises at nearly 600 miles an hour required 48 hours and 40 minutes to go 150 feet in Dallas. It slipped off an icy runway and bogged down in mud.
