Kitchen Ambassador Takes Term In Jug

NEW YORK (AP) — A 30-year-old hotel kitchen worker was packed off to jail a second time Tuesday for living it up — on the cuff — as a fake ambassador from Africa.

William Constantine, a Negro with a small goatee and mustache, told Magistrate Edward J. Chapman he chucked his kitchen job at a Catskill Mountain resort last Wednesday and signed into New York's Hotel Commodore as ambassador from Ghana.

Previously, Constantine admitted, he had been juggled six months for fleeing the Waldorf-Astoria by representing himself as the envoy from Ethiopia.

Police said he carried no luggage as he moved into the Commodore, but got royal treatment from bowing functionaries with no questions asked. Thereupon he began to live in high style in his $23-a-day suite.

He made phone calls to Washington, arranged for a party in another hotel and hired a young woman as receptionist.

Things went fine until some American Express checks belonging to the young woman disappeared. The ensuing investigation brought to light Constantine's lack of diplomatic standing.

Constantine pleaded guilty to a charge of defrauding a hotel.

There Is Culture

Culture, if given the opportunity, spreads.

This has been proven by one special group on campus dedicated to furthering culture at Texas A&M through proficiency in stage and drama.

Last night's initial meeting of the Aggie Players hosted almost 50 persons interested in working and acting this year; this was a larger number than had ever before gathered for such a "kick-off" affair. For the Players, like any organization, past success breeds assurance of future progress and achievement.

In the past few years, this organization has time and again presented drama at its best, on the stage of Guion Hall, in the lower level of the Memorial Student Center—where ever their location.

This year, the Players have two productions on tap for fall, starting with "Twelve Angry Men" in early November and "Candida" in December.

By presenting these plays to audiences of A&M and the Bryan-College Station area, the dramatists are helping to diffuse culture through their selected medium—the stage.

The Aggie Players have more support than ever before this year, but advocacy of their work is something that has no limit. In the months to come, students, faculty and administration alike will have opportunity to offer this backing.

And promoting culture is something that should come naturally at any institution of higher learning.

Come on, Maris! Break that 1927 home-run record. It would certainly be reassuring to know that something today is better than it used to be.

Honor Code Questions

(Editor's note—The new Honor Code. What is it? Will it work?)

We will try to answer as many questions as possible concerning the code. Address them to the Battalion, College Station, Texas. We will see that a member of the Honor Council Committee answers the questions, and provides an answer for you.)

What part will the code play in the honor code?

According to Dean of Students James P. Hannigan, the Honor Council is interested in the code. At a recent meeting of the council, Hannigan said the code he had with him. He said the instructors wanted to see the student honor code and will take care of the questions in their classes.

Will the accused ever face his accuser?

It is hoped the accused never have to face his accuser. However, this would depend on the nature of the case, and the honor council would decide. It may say this is understood that every accused person has the right to face his accuser. The honor council committee, with the class organization A&M, this policy would be wise.
